Bilbao Opens Counter Drive To Halt Foes At City Gates

Defense Still Stubborn Amid Incessant Air Bombing Raids.

Loyalists Admit 'Iron Ring' Broken

Insurgent Sound Trucks Spread Victory News in Basque Towns.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 13.—Almost at the gates of the city the Basque defenders of Bilbao today lashed back at their insurgent besiegers in desperate counter-attacks.

In spite of incessant bombing raids by the insurgent air force, which flew over the battlefield unchallenged by government aircraft, the Basques declared their infantry had fought stubbornly against the enemy advance, which had reached the edge of their capital.

Insurgent reports, however, asserted the tide of battle was still with them.

Trucks equipped with loudspeakers cruised throughout the Basque territory already in the invaders' hands to carry tidings of insurgent victory. Insurgents declared the people of the occupied towns and villages received news of their advance with joy.

Military communiques were shouted from the trucks hour by hour as the forces of Gen. Fidel Davila came within sight of the city on the Bay of Biscay.

Eastern Side Taken.

The entire territory on Bilbao's eastern side was controlled by the insurgents while Basque forces operating along the shore of the estuary northwest of their capital appeared in danger of being cut off.

The current drive in the "final" offensive against Bilbao was based tonight on the Basques' own "iron ring" defense at two points where it was broken yesterday northeast of Galdacano, east of the capital.

Insurgents literally poured men through those breaks and spread out in fanlike formation over the hills beyond.

Hours before sundown, more than 400 prisoners had been trundled back to the rear in trucks over dusty roads filled with troops and war materials moving up to the front.

So swift has been the insurgent advance that many of the prisoners were non-combatants who came from Bilbao to see what the front looked like—only to be engulfed themselves by the onrushing invaders.

Watched by Franco.

An insurgent broadcast tonight said Gen. Francisco Franco watched the operations against Bilbao in company with Gen. Davila.

Another insurgent radio report said evacuation of the Basque capital had begun.

Basque President Aguirre received newspapermen and gave them copies of a document addressed to "the presidents of democratic European and American nations."

In it he asked: "Is there not a breath of humanity left in the world's conscience to prevent the accomplishment of the most frightful injustice known to the world?"

Basques Admit Losses.

Basque leaders admitted tonight the first line of the "iron ring" defending Bilbao had been broken by the insurgent drive, the most vicious offensive loosed by either side in the civil war.

They declared the situation of the capital was dangerous, but not desperate.

However, the cabinet of the autonomous Basque regime was understood to be in almost constant session.

Several British and French destroyers were reported lying in Bilbao's port near the mouth of the Nervion River, ready to evacuate President Jose Antonio Aguirre and other members of the government if necessary.

From 50 to 80 insurgent airplanes, without opposition in the air, were constantly flying over the Basque positions, machine gunning and bombing trenches and troop concentrations.

Gen. Gamir Uribarri, commander in chief of the defense, said the worst insurgent attacks against Madrid were tame compared to the pounding Bilbao has received.

Loyalists Attack Elsewhere.

Madrid, June 13 (AP).—Spanish government commanders, seeking to help their hard-pressed Basque allies by exerting pressure on the insurgents elsewhere, today threw large forces into action on the Aragon front, in northeastern Spain, and above Cordoba, in the south.

One of the heaviest government air attacks of the civil war, about Huesca and Zaragoza, in Aragon, marked revival of activity in these long quiet war zones.

Madrid, watching the progress of the long-awaited government offensives, was shelled heavily by insurgent artillery.

Fog Blankets Pole.

Moscow, June 13 (AP).—Fog and snow today blanketed the Soviet weather observation camp near the North Pole and reduced visibility to about 900 yards. The temperature was 26.6 Fahrenheit.

U. S. Judges Oppose 'Roving Court' Plan

Steiwer Survey Shows Many Favor Permanent Appointments Against Roosevelt Proposal for Mobile Staff of Jurists.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Judges in the Federal district courts are overwhelmingly opposed to the scheme of a mobile force of roving judges as contemplated in President Roosevelt's judiciary reorganization bill, it was revealed by a survey made public yesterday by Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), of Oregon.

The announcement came on the eve of the scheduled filing of an unfavorable majority report by the Senate Judiciary Committee on the President's bill.

Senator Steiwer, a member of the committee, some weeks ago canvassed the views of the senior judges in all the Federal district courts as to whether their dockets were congested, whether they needed help and whether they believed assigning of additional judges to their districts was more efficacious than appointment of additional judges.

The results of the Steiwer survey constitute the first substantial attack to come from within Congress against that part of the Presidential bill dealing with the lower courts. Their release at this time indicates a determination on the part of the opposition to the President's bill to kill not only the provisos relating to the Supreme Court bill but the entire measure.

Roving Judges Provided.

Mr. Roosevelt's bill would empower the President to name an additional judge to Federal circuit and district courts for each incumbent eligible to retire at the age of 70 years, who has not done so within six months, with a limitation on the number of such appointments. If the services of the additional judges so appointed are not needed in the circuit or district to which they have been appointed, they are to be assigned to districts where congestion exists.

A survey undertaken by The Washington Post last February showed docket congestion existed in only four district courts where there were judges over 70 years old. But under his plan the President, that survey showed, could name 12 additional district judges. It was planned to use these additional judges as a mobile force to be assigned around the country to clear up congestion. Senator Steiwer's survey indicates the present district judges, with few exceptions, do not approve of such a plan.

Senator Steiwer received 72 replies. Of these 14 judges contended they needed additional help in their districts—and that this help would be needed permanently or for some time. Of the remainder of the replies, 53 judges reported additional judges were not needed in their districts, while five gave noncommittal answers.

Permanent Judges Preferred.

The significant thing about these replies was the opinion expressed by all but a few of the judges interrogated that permanent appointment of additional judges to their districts, when needed, was preferable to the plan of assigning to their districts judges from other States and districts. Only one of the 14 judges who stated they needed additional help leaned favorably to the plan of assigning judges to their districts temporarily.

The judges opposing such a plan contended it was not practicable and would not afford the needed relief. Several cited instances out of their experience with judges as-

Farley Begins Drive on Bogus Life Protection

100 Agencies Cost Nation 'Staggering Sums.' He Asserts.

A Nation-wide drive against operators of bogus mutual benefit life "protection" organizations that cost the public "staggering sums" annually was announced last night by Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Complaints reaching the Postoffice Department indicate that approximately 100 such fraudulent enterprises are now using the mails to promote their schemes, Farley said.

The promoters, who accept persons into their organizations indiscriminately up to the age of 85, take advantage of the fact that very few people read their certificates—particularly the fine print containing the exceptions and limitations.

"Beneficiaries soon find out, when members die," Farley said, "that exceptions in the fine print wholly nullify any liability of the society."

In order to circumvent existing State laws, the spurious organizers avoid use of the word "insurance" and substitute the word "protection." Instead of "policy," they use "certificate;" and instead of "premium," they call a payment a "voluntary contribution."

They further mislead their victims by selecting confidence-inspiring titles similar to ones borne by

Woman, 108, Walks Up Hill to Church, Then Tills Garden

Boonton, N. J., June 13 (AP).—A high mass of thanksgiving was celebrated today at a little hilltop church in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Doris Mattis, reputed to be 108 years old.

Unaided, she walked up the half-mile hills to Sts. Cyril and Methodius Roman Catholic Church, where she worships every Sunday, and took her place of honor as the Rev. Andrew V. Stefan performed the rites of the faith she adopted in her native Austria a century ago.

She chatted with friends and neighbors on the long descent to her home below and invited one and all to "drop in and see me on my birthday next year."

Back home, the widow puttered around her garden for a while and then, admittedly "a bit tuckered," sat in her favorite rocker on the porch to greet the folks come to bid her "many happy returns."

Tomorrow she'll go back to her housework.

Kidnap Hunt Is Extended Into Homes

House-to-House Search of Area Ordered in Parsons Case.

U. S., State and Local Authorities, Scouts Join Forces.

By the Associated Press.

Stony Brook, N. Y., June 13.—After five days of fruitless waiting for the family of Mrs. Alice Parsons to negotiate her release from the hands of supposed kidnapers, Federal, State, and local authorities ordered tonight a house-to-house search of this Long Island community.

Confirming reports of a joint conference to plan an intensive hunt for the missing heiress within a radius of 10 miles of Stony Brook, Lieut. Stacey Wilson, of the Brookhaven police, said the search would probably begin tomorrow.

Other police sources revealed that the immediate area around the Parsons' country home had already been given a careful search. Fifty to 75 Boy Scouts will join Federal agents, State troopers, and local officials when the general search is started.

The officials would not say that their plans to search the neighborhood indicated a belief that Mrs. Parsons had been slain.

Parsons Pleads for Contact.

The decision to resume an active hunt for Mrs. Parsons came shortly after her husband, William H. Parsons, issued a new statement urging the persons or person responsible for the disappearance of his wife "to immediately communicate with me." He asked, also, that investigators remain away from the Parsons home so that a contact might be made.

"I again wish to assure this person or persons that I stand ready to comply with any instructions they may give. Whatever is humanly possible will be done by me to see anything they may request is done in secrecy," said the gentleman poultry farmer whose wife vanished down the driveway of their small estate here Wednesday morning.

He reiterated requests made by members of the family in the last few days for privacy so that the authors of the ransom note would not be frightened away.

Parsons' Statement.

Parsons gave out the statement on the lawn of the estate, where he posed for cameramen and read part of the statement for newsreel photographers.

A few minutes before, a local investigator who declined to be quoted directly, disclosed that, working on a murder theory, his aides had questioned informally several individuals.

Throughout four days of tense, fruitless waiting, the ransom note, found in a parked car near the home, has remained almost the sole tangible clew to the strange vanishing of the socially prominent matron.

Simultaneous with Parsons' appearance from seclusion, Assistant District Attorney Lindsay Henry announced that a conference between local authorities and Department of Justice agents this afternoon resulted in renewal of co-operation between the two investigating agencies. Local officials heatedly an-

Finland Pays Off; Other War Nations Once More Default

London, June 13 (AP).—The United States World War allies today prepared once more to give "regretful" notice they will default the installments due Tuesday on the obligations they incurred in wartime two decades ago.

The British goverment was expected to make the same negative reply it has made each six months since three years ago to Washington's reminder that another semi-annual installment is due on the $4,277,000,000 Britain borrowed, which, with accrued interest, has grown to $5,198,000,000.

Only from Finland could the United States expect payment. Twelve other war debtors already are in default to a grand total of $1,314,821,109, and $205,338,754 due Tuesday will swell that to $1,520,159,863.

(Finland notified the State Department May 29 its debt installment of $163,143 would be paid on schedule.)

C. I. O. Challenges Vigilantes, Threatens Monroe Invasion; Lewis Orders Coal Walkout

9,500 in Captive Mines Called Out

Labor Board Orders Inland Steel to Answer Complaint.

By Russell Smith

John L. Lewis yesterday announced a far-flung labor alliance and called it to battle against a financial-industrial entente he said is responsible for continuance of the steel strike.

In the latest bid of the Committee for Industrial Organization for leadership of organized labor, Lewis ordered 9,500 coal miners at captive mines of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Bethlehem Steel companies to strike, and to halt shipments to those companies' plants.

Then he announced agreement has been reached between striking steel workers and striking members of two railroad brotherhoods at Bethlehem's Johnstown, Pa., plant that neither will settle with the management until both receive agreeable terms.

Finally, he asserted a formal working arrangement has been concluded between strikers at Republic and Bethlehem plants.

Girdler Is Assailed.

Of the financial-industrial entente he said exists, Lewis declared Eugene C. Grace, chairman of the board of Bethlehem, and William C. Potter, of the Guaranty Trust Co., New York, are "working" together to finance the steel strike.

He then demanded that they be brought to "a public accounting" and that Tom Girdler, president of the Republic Steel Corporation, whom he termed a "monomaniac" and a "supergunman" be restrained by the Federal Government from his present policies.

Grace is "the power behind Girdler," Lewis charged, adding:

"In this combine are also Republic, National Steel Corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, and Inland Steel."

Simultaneously with Lewis' condemnation of Inland Steel, the National Labor Relations Board called upon that firm to answer a complaint that it "has shown it would not enter into a signed agreement . . . even though the terms proposed by the S. W. O. C. (Steel Workers Organizing Committee, a C. I. O. agency) be acceptable to it."

The complaint also charged, the board said, that Inland Steel promoted an organization of workers known as the Steel Workers Independent Union, Inc., and that it had warned employes not to join nationally affiliated unions. Hearing was set for June 21 in Chicago.

Urges Government Action.

Although a strike against Inland at Indiana Harbor and Chicago Heights is now in progress, National Steel, another independent named by Lewis, is not yet among the struck companies.

After announcing his dispositions for the coming showdown in the steel strike, Lewis read this prepared statement:

"Tom Girdler is a heavily armed monomaniac, with murderous tendencies, who has gone berserk. Potter and Grace have turned him loose upon the unarmed steel workers.

"Girdler should be restrained and disarmed by the Government before he turns the steel districts into a bloody shambles and looses all the pent-up forces of human passion.

"Potter and Grace should be called to a public accounting. The warfare should be stopped by the simple act of signing an agreement."

One question-and-answer interview after this statement, he added:

"The agreement I mean is the same agreement 139 steel companies have signed. It is a blanket agreement covering wages and hours.

"One sensible way (of "restraining" Girdler) would be for the Government to request the governors of

Garner, Very Tired, Stops for the Night In Cincinnati Hotel

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 13 (AP).—Vice President John N. Garner, en route to Texas for a vacation, paused in Cincinnati tonight but, ordering crackers and milk for a party of three, retired to a hotel room with orders not to be disturbed. A hotel attache said he "appeared very tired" and indicated the party would resume their westward motor trip at daybreak.

Wind Injures Six In Indiana Town

Mellott, Ind., June 13 (AP).—Six persons were injured, two seriously enough to require hospital treatment, and at least five homes were destroyed and several others damaged by a windstorm which swept through this Fountain County town early tonight.

The town was plunged into darkness after the storm disrupted the electric system.

Amelia Earhart Starts Flight To Arabia After Sudan Pause

Wings 500 Miles From El Fasher to Khartoum and Then Takes Air After Halt of Hour and 14 Minutes.

By the Associated Press.

Khartoum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, June 13.—Amelia Earhart paused only briefly at this historic capital of the Sudan today on her flight around the middle of the earth.

She set her monoplane down here at 7:28 a. m., Greenwich mean time (2:28 a. m., Eastern standard time), after a 500-mile flight from El Fasher in the western Sudan.

An hour and 14 minutes later she was in the air again winging her way toward Asia. She hoped to reach Aden, British possession at the southwestern tip of Arabia, on this hop, although she said she might land at Massawa, in Italian Eritrea.

Aden, which lies about 850 miles east-southeast of Khartoum, across northern Ethiopia and the Red Sea, would be her first Asiatic stopping place. Massawa, capital of Eritrea, is about 450 miles due east of Khartoum.

Miss Earhart said she might stop long enough at Massawa to have her engine thoroughly overhauled.

"I've been flying high most of the time across Africa and have had little chance for sightseeing," she said.

"So far the territory I have covered in Africa looks much like the southwest of the United States. I must pinch myself to realize my whereabouts. There is the same arid terrain, the same mountains and the same straw-topped adobe villages."

Jardine Quits, Denies Duke's Wedding Cause

Vicar Makes Announcement From Pulpit; Defied Church.

By the Associated Press.

Darlington, England, June 13.—The Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, who braved the disproval of the Church of England to perform the marriage service for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, tonight announced his resignation as vicar of St. Paul's Church, Darlington.

From his pulpit he declared his resignation had "nothing to do with events which have taken place lately."

The announcement came during the evening sermon and was a surprise even to his wife.

The Rev. Mr. Jardine has been vicar of St. Paul's since 1927. He remained in obscurity until two days before the marriage of the former King Edward VIII and Wallis Warfield at the Chateau de Cande, in France, when he appeared at the chateau and announced he would perform the church rite for the couple.

Until then it appeared Church of England leaders would succeed in their effort to withhold the church's blessing from the union of the former King and the twice-divorced Mrs. Warfield.

A week ago tonight in the same pulpit the Rev. Mr. Jardine, just back from France, told his congregation he had been "just a simple channel for God's will" and strenuously defended his action. It was announced a movement would be started to raise a $25,000 fund for him.

Munich Cardinal Protests Priest's Arrest by Nazis

Munich, Germany, June 13 (AP).—Announcement that Michael Cardinal von Faulhaber had sent a protest to the Reich church ministry against the arrest of Rupert Mayr, a priest, was made today from Catholic pupils.

The priest was arrested here June 5 on charges of delivering an anti-government sermon. The announcement said the Cardinal contended Mayr's arrest violated the concordat between Germany and the Vatican. Special prayers were offered for the priest, who remained in a Munich jail.

Will Reform Picket Lines in 2 Days, Huge Throng Hears.

Huge Rally Held As Troops Watch

Martin Flies to Meeting Outside City, Promises Fight to Finish.

By the Associated Press.

Monroe, Mich., June 13.—Van A. Bittner, Chicago C. I. O. organizer, flung a dramatic challenge at uneasy Monroe today that the city will be without peace until steel labor contracts are signed.

"In two days," he told thousands massed in a protest meeting at Lakeside Park, 3 miles outside the city, "we will be back."

The gathering was called to protest the breaking of a picket line last Thursday at the Newton Steel Co. plant of the Republic Steel Corporation, which has refused to sign a labor contract.

Hair rumpled in the breeze, his arm waving in emphatic gestures, the ordinarily mild-spoken Bittner shouted the ultimatum.

The statement drew immediate answer from within the barricaded city.

Mayor Daniel A. Knaggs declared "Monroe and surrounding towns will rise as one man in defense of their community against armed invaders."

Elderly John McMillan, a leading citizen, operator of a printing plant in Monroe, said that if the union men attempted to invade the city, a courthouse bell would ring and "5,000 armed vigilantes will appear within 15 minutes."

Vigilantes Are Armed.

As though to emphasize this dictum, armed vigilantes lolled on the lawn at City Hall. Some carried hunting knives strapped to their waists. Most of them had clubs, and some carried pistols.

A few had guns in holsters. Others just stuffed them in their belts or hip pockets. Most of the vigilantes carried flashlights, apparently determined to keep a night-long watch against any attempt to restore the C. I. O. picket lines which were routed in a tear-gas attack last Thursday.

Two machine guns commanded the road to the Newton steel plant.

But the crowd at Lakeside Park estimated by Merlin Bishop, United Automobile Workers Union official, at 35,000, although other estimates ranged as low as 10,000—started breaking up at nightfall and there was no indication that any immediate attempt would be made to restore the picket line at the Newton plant.

The most apprehensive day in Monroe's history had passed without violence.

Troops to Withdraw.

National guardsmen were ordered tonight to take down their tents and leave the city. State police lifted their road blockade about the same time.

Harry H. Holloway, district manager for Republic Steel and vice president of the Newton Steel Co., commented on the withdrawal of national guardsmen:

"Any bloodshed will be the Governor's responsibility."

On the long front of the Nation's strike troubles, ominous rumblings were heard and significant developments occurred as the Monroe gathering passed without incident.

In Washington, John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., announced he had called a strike of 9,500 miners in diggings owned by the Bethlehem Steel Co., to bolster a strike in the big Cambria works of the concern at Johnstown.

Violence flared between union and nonunion automobile workers at Anderson, Ind., nine were injured in a wild shooting affray.

Three nonstrikers, a policeman and a picket were slightly hurt at Johnstown, at the Franklin plant of Cambria and 75 State police were ordered in.

Earle Ends Conference.

Talk of a general strike at Youngstown fell through when the United Labor Congress decided, instead, to petition Gov. Martin L. Davey, of Ohio, to use all the resources at his command to settle the Republic Steel strike in Youngstown. In the meantime, Gov. Davey adopted a policy of watchful waiting, hoping his adjourned peace

Vacationist in Potomac 8 Hours Before Rescue After Craft Is Overturned by Hit-Run Boat

A hit-run motorboatman Saturday night upset a sailboat vacation for A. C. Lewis, Washington advertising man, and left him to drift down the Potomac for eight watery hours—holding onto his overturned craft and endeavoring to save his vacation supplies.

Tossed into the water at Hains Point at 7 p. m., Lewis and his boat were rescued from the river at Alexandria at near 3 o'clock Sunday morning by members of the Alexandria police force.

He left the Washington Canoe Club at 11:30 a. m. Saturday and was sailing alone to Colonial Beach, 65 miles away.

Henry Scott, fireman at the Alexandria Gas Co., heard him calling for aid and turned in the alarm. The rescue was effected opposite the Ford plant by Policemen Frederick Kaus, Francis C. Johnson, John C. Wilkinson, and Gordon L. Sanders.

Lewis was in an exhausted state when policemen reached him, although he said he believed he still could have swum to the shore.

"But I was not going to leave the boat," he declared. "I have been taking my vacations in sailboats for years and I was not going to let go."

If he had drifted 200 yards farther, however, Sergt. Kaus said, there would have been no chance of his calls being heard.

"He would have been beyond the lower point and no one ever would have heard him. He was cool and collected when we reached him, but I believe he was too tired to make it to the banks alone."

Lewis lost the rudder to his boat, his gun, camera, clothes and some money.

"I saved about half of the supplies, but as is usual in such cases, the best stuff got away," he said.

He will spend most of the vacation time he has left, he said, fixing up the boat.

On former vacations he has sailed as far away as Piney Point, 125 miles, and always without mishap.

"A sail was between me and the motorboat that sideswiped me. Probably the operator never saw he upset me, as it was getting dark, but I have a feeling he did," Lewis declared.

He had expected to reach Colonal Beach sometime last night.

"I think the Alexandria police force worked with speed and efficiency. I never saw smoother action," he said.

Husband of Former Doris Duke Seized With Camera in Moscow

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 13.—James H. R. Cromwell, husband of the former Doris Duke, was detained in the National Hotel today for an hour and a half for attempting to take pictures in front of the hotel which adjoins the United States Embassy.

He said he was photographing the hotel when a uniformed officer approached and informed him he was under arrest.

The American was told it was forbidden to take pictures of the Kremlin walls which form the background for the hotel and the United States Embassy.

A plain clothes man arrived and to the two officials, using French and German, Cromwell explained he had no illegal intentions and was permitted to go to the hotel.

His wife joined in protesting to effect his release in order that they might take a scheduled trip to the famous Novodyevici Monastery, but the tour finally was canceled.

Films taken by Cromwell, including some taken in Algeria, were confiscated but he was promised the return of all pictures not proscribed. He then was permitted to leave the hotel.

Mrs. Cromwell, who has been suffering from a heavy cold since their arrival here Thursday, will have only tomorrow to see the sights of Moscow as her husband announced they will leave tomorrow for Leningrad.

From there, he said, they would go direct to Helsingfors, Finland, with no intention of returning to the Soviet Union.

Congress Held Blocking Merit System Plans

Patronage Fights Threaten Program, Reform League Says.

The extension of the merit system proposed by President Roosevelt may be jeopardized by the controversy which has ensued over his other recommendations for reorganization of the Fedeal establishment, the National Civil Service Reform League warned last night.

"Congress has been the chief obstacle to the extension of the civil service rules, not only to the new agencies, but to the old agencies of the Government," the annual report of the league said, yet it found that recent Congressional actions give little reason for optimism.

"Within less than two months after the President's message on the merit system it adopted two important measures, the crop-control law and the bbituminous coal regulation law, which except from the civil service rules all employes. Congress is now wrangling over patronage in the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Grants Held Up.

Grants-in-aid to the States have ben held up for over two months pending the result of the Senate's insistance on retaining control over the patronage through requirement of Senate confirmation of positions in the Social Security Board paying over $5,000. Wholesale patronage provisions are in the railroad retirement bill and in the Maritime Commission reorganization bill."

As to whether the President or Congress shall decide what positions shall be deemed policy determining and excepted from civil service law, the league said: "That discretion were better left to the Executive, but with a limitation as to the aggregate number of positions which may be excepted as policy determining posts." There are not over 300 such positions in the Federal Government today, it contended.

325,000 Excepted.

More than 325,000 positions now are excepted from competition, most of them by acts of Congress, the report asserted. This, it said, "sets an example which has a blighting effect upon the merit system."

"The functions which the Federal Government is now called upon to perform requires more and more the service of the technician and the expert, and less and less of those of the political manager," the league declared. "There can be no real career system to attract technicians and experts if most of the higher administrative positions are closed to those who would look to Government service as a life work."

Transit Hearing On Higher Fares To Start Today

Two demands, one asking a 5-cent streetcar and bus fare and another asking an increase in the cost of car tokens, will come before the Public Utilities Commission today as Capital Transit Co. rate hearings start at 10 a. m.

A fight is expected between spokesmen for the Federation of Citizens Associations, which is asking for the lower fare, and officials of the Capital Transit Co., which is petitioning to increase the price of tokens from four for 30 cents to four for 35 cents.

The transit company's request to boost the token price is an amendment to a year-old petition in which it asked permission to raise the price of tokens from four for 30 cents to three for 25 cents. The Public Utilities Commission postponed consideration of the first plea until it could obtain a revaluation of streetcar and bus properties.

At a meeting a week ago, the Federation of Citizens Associations adopted a resolution asking that the 5-cent fare be put into effect for a six-month trial period. The proposal will probably be brought before the Commission today by William McK. Clayton, chairman of the federation's public utilities committee.

New Faces in Congress

Rep. Wene, New Jersey, Asks Excise Tax on Chinese Eggs

REPRESENTATIVE ELMER H. WENE.

Tall Bachelor New in Politics but He Has Hatchery That Can Produce 1,500,000 Chicks at a Setting.

By Liam K. Lenihan.

This business of politics may be a new experience to Elmer H. Wene but don't cross him in an argument about baby chick breeding values.

As owner and operator of Wene Chick Farms at Vineland, N. J., Wene has seen his small plant become within the short span of 15 years one of the largest in the world with a capacity of 1,500,000 eggs in a single setting.

But if White Leghorns are a far cry from Washington's legislative hatchery, one should not jump to the conclusion that the New Jersey congressman is foundering in political shoals.

He is tall, blue-eyed, and a bachelor. Years in business have given him an aptitude to appraise people and to make the most of opportunity. But success has not dulled his sense of social responsibility and he is to the forefront in acclaiming "new blood in Government" and the philosophy of "a fair share for the working man."

Biographical note: He was born on a farm near Pittstown in Huntertown County, New Jersey, May 1, 1892; was educated in the public schools, then completed a special course at Rutgers University, New Brunswick; lectured on the poultry industry in many of the leading agricultural colleges of the United States; was connected with an experimental station for seven years before he went into business for himself.

Although Wene was never active in Democratic politics, for years he has been associated with many public activities. He served on the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture for nine years, has been president of the International Baby Chick Association and of the Vineland-Landis Chamber of Commerce. He is a Mason, an Elk, a member of the Grange and belongs to the Methodist-Episcopal Church.

Shorts: Representative Wene is interested in waterways and in an excise tax on Chinese eggs. He is now boosting legislation that would establish a Federal Bureau of Poultry. He favors the infusion of new blood in the Supreme Court; if it gets to the voting stage he will back the President's program.

Most Historic City Letter Delivered At Fredericksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 13.—A letter addressed to Dr. T. W. Dew in "America's Most Historic City, Va.," has been delivered to the physician here.

Mailed by a friend of Dr. Dew in Tennessee, the letter went to Williamsburg. There the postmaster wrote upon the envelop, "Try Fredericksburg."

Fredericksburg, Williamsburg and Charleston, S. C., laid claim to the title of "America's Most Historic City" in a friendly argument in the press a number of years ago. Fredericksburg, asserting it is most deserving of the title, has clung to it most persistently and seemingly has won public recognition of its claim.

Joint Hearings In Tax-Dodging Due Tomorrow

Morgenthau Expected to Be First Witness to Be Heard.

By the Associated Press.

Congress will set out this week, probably tomorrow, on its No. 1 inquiry of the session—public hearings by a joint Senate-House committee on alleged income tax evasion and avoidance.

Secretary Morgenthau is expected to be the first witness, his testimony disclosing the names and details connected with President Roosevelt's charge in a message to Congress that wealthy persons had dodged taxes by such devices as the incorporation of yachts and estates.

A closely guarded Treasury list was understood to include a number of the Nation's best-known owners of great wealth. Some or all on that list will be invited by the committee to defend themselves against allegations that, through counsel, they had takne advantage of loopholes in the tax structure to the "substantial loss" of internal revenue collections.

Chairman McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, of the Senate Postoffice Committee, said the date for an inquiry into the steel strike was "indefinite" and that the investigation probably would not begin until after the Administration's $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation bill was out of the way in the Senate.

Chairman Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, of the special Senate Committee said investigation of unemployment and relief, recently decided upon, was "indefinite." The inquiry was urged by Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico.

The relief bill will be taken up in the Senate tomorrow, carrying an amendment by the Appropriations Committee under which local sponsors of WPA projects, if financially able, would be required to put up 40 per cent of the cost.

The Senate today probably will receive from its Judiciary Committee an unfavorable report on the Administration's court bill which, along with other items, leaders planned to let lie at least until after disposal of the relief legislation.

The House tomorrow will debate the $194,000,000 appropriation for flood control, river and harbor projects, Panama Canal operations and other non-military activities of the War Department. On Thursday, if the way is clear, the House will take up a bill to provide a method of impeaching Federal judges through some form of "trial board" to be set up by the Supreme Court. Impeachment now reposes alone with the Senate.

Public Works Can Bar Depressions, Ickes Maintains

By the Associated Press.

Public Works Administrator Ickes said yesterday the PWA had proved that "public works can be used as an effective weapon" against depressions.

Looking back on four years of PWA activity, Ickes said he felt the country should be proud of its 25,117 projects involving expenditure of $3,142,554,487 as of May 1.

He predicted it would take two more years to complete projects still under construction, but added that the agency now is "curtailing its activities and husbanding the Nation's credit.

"The Public Works Administration, without a precedent to guide," Ickes said, "launched the largest construction program in history. More significant, however, in my opinion, is the fact that PWA has proved that public works can be used as an effective weapon against depression.

"PWA made possible four-fifths of all public construction in the United States the past four years.

"Schools have always been favored. I am happy to report that approximately 70 per cent of all of the schools built in the United States since 1933 were erected with the aid of PWA."

Two Are Accused In Death Attempt

Luray, Va., June 13.—Authorities today were holding Luther Good and William McKoy, both of Page County, on attempted murder charges following accusations of Melvin Cubbage, of Stanley, who said the pair attacked him Wednesday night and placed him unconscious on the Norfolk & Western tracks at Stanley.

An engineer on a passenger train told police he noticed an object on the tracks near the station and immediately applied the brakes, the train coming to a stop within a few feet of Cubbage.

Cubbage, unconscious, and suffering many wounds on the head and stab wounds on the body, was taken to the office of a physician by the train crew.

Although still in a serious condition, Cubbage regained consciousness yesterday and named McKoy and Good as his assailants.

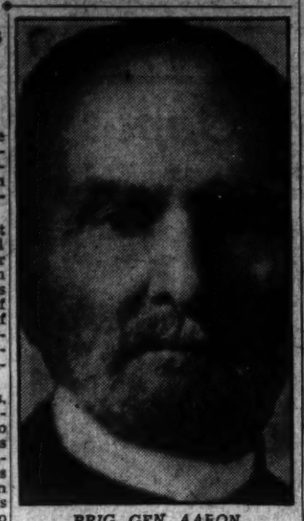
Gen. Dagget Is 100 Today; Oldest Army Officer in U.S.

Veteran of Two Wars Is Congratulated by President.



BRIG. GEN. AARON S. DAGGETT.

The oldest Army officer in the country, Brig. Gen. Aaron S. Daggett, a one-time resident of Washington, today celebrates his 100th birthday at his home in West Roxbury, Mass.

This morning the veteran of most of the important battles of the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and the China Relief Expedition in 1900 will receive personal greetings from the President, the Secretary of War and Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff. The messages will be delivered to Gen. Daggett by an officer from the First Corps Area headquarters, in Boston.

In his message of congratulations, President Roosevelt said "Personally, as well as officially, I wish to extend my warmest congratulations on the occasion of your 100th birthday. It has been given to you, as to few individuals, to witness an even century of your country's progress. You were not content to be a mere spectator during this 100-year span. You not only saw history made but you, yourself, helped to make it."

Was Born in 1837.

Gen. Daggett was born June 14, 1837, at Green Corner, Me. In 1861 he enlisted as a volunteer in the Maine Infantry. He was promoted through various grades, being mustered out of the service at the end of the war as a lieutenant colonel.

He saw service in the first battle of Bull Rull, West Point, Gaines' Mills, Goldings' Farm, White Oak Swamp, Second Battle of Bull Run, Battle of Crampton Gap, Antietam and Fredericksburg, second battle of Fredericksburg, Salem Church, Gettysburg, Rappahannock Station, Mine Run, Wilderness, Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor and Petersburg.

After the Civil War, Gen. Daggett served in various Southern States during the reconstruction period. Later he was on duty in the West, and in Boston. He took part in the battle at San Juan in the Spanish-American War.

The following year he was ordered to the Philippine Islands, where he participated in numerous battles and skirmishes. Later he sailed for China, where he served with the China Relief Expedition at Yangtsun and Pekin. On August 15, 1900, he led the attack on the gates of the Imperial City.

Following his China expedition, he retired from active service as a brigadier general, after several promotions. In 1904 he was recalled to active duty for a year with the Organized Militia of Nebraska. Shortly afterward he moved to Washington, living here for several years. He is the author of "America in the China Relief Expedition."

For his Civil War services, Gen. Daggett was three times cited for gallantry. Similarly, he was commended for his service in China. On his ninety-ninth birthday, he was awarded the Silver Star decoration with oak leaf cluster for his Chinese experiences, and the Purple Heart award, with oak leaf cluster, for wounds received during the Civil War.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., June 13 (AP).—Keeping a vow made 244 years ago, more than 2,000 Catholics trudged through Santa Fe's winding streets today. Church officials said the procession has been held without interruption since 1693.

In that year Don Diego de Varas subdued rebellious Indians to regain the villa for Spain. On the eve of his conquest he vowed to the Virgini Mary that if he were successful a procession in her honor would be held each year.

Woodrum Describes New Freedom Idea

Charlottesville, Va., June 13 (AP).—Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, said today experience of the past five years has taught the American people a new meaning of the word "freedom."

"Never again in the years to come," Woodrum said at Flag Day exercises sponsored by the national Elks' organization, "shall we as a Nation be content to sit idly by in smug complacency and see millions of our fellow citizens driven down into the depths of despair and degradation, with no feeling of obligation on our part to try to alleviate their condition.

"Individuality, self-reliance and self-responsibility must and will be preserved in our citizens."

Publicity Pay Of Half Million By U. S. Listed

Spent Without Special Appropriation, Says Brookings Report.

By the Associated Press.

The Brookings Institute reported yesterday the Federal Government paid "more than $500,000" in the 1936 fiscal year to persons engaged in full-time or allocated part-time publicity work.

The Institute, making a study looking to Federal Government reorganization, was engaged by a special Senate committee headed by Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia.

The report cited the law as saying that no money appropriated by Congress shall be used for paying any publicity expert unless specifically appropriated for that purpose.

"No specific appropriations for publicity experts have been made," the report said, "but it is safe to say this law did not put an end to any publicity activities, nor has it prevented employment of personnel for that purpose."

House members meanwhile mulled over a phase of the reorganization proposal submitted by another committee named by President Roosevelt.

New Secretaries Considered.

Mr. Roosevelt, in transmitting to Congress the report of his committee, urged that Chief Executives be given a larger White House staff.

Legislation now before Congress would provide six additional assistant secretaries for the White House.

Some House members said today they thought each of the new assistant secretaries should be a $10,000-a-year man because the duties will be exacting and on the same level as those performed by present assistant secretaries.

Chairman Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, said recently, however, that $40,000 probably would be enough to pay the entire six, and that no legislation would be necessary to create the positions.

Assails Opposition.

Cochran said the committee probably would formally start work on the reorganization plan this week.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the House, he said the Republican membership there "has gone out of its way" to oppose two recommendations of the President for reorganization which, Cochran contended, were "advocated repeatedly by the last Republican President in his messages to Congress."

Cochran said he referred to the proposal for a single personnel administrator to replace the Civil Service Commission and to the recommendation for separating "the administrative aspects of independent regulatory commissions, and make these aspects, such as budgeting and personnel, subject to the review and supervision by the Executive."

2 Men Killed, 9 Injured in Motor Crashes

D. C. Resident, Virginian Lose Lives; Toll Here Reaches 51.

Washington and Virginia traffic accidents yesterday took a toll of two lives, and in the District and nearby Maryland nine other motorists suffered injuries requiring hospital treatment.

The dead are:

Maddox Bailey, 25, Kinsale, Va.

Duvall's death raised the District of Columbia's traffic toll for 1937 to 51. The latest accident victim, Duvall died in Casualty Hospital early yesterday from injuries suffered when his truck overturned.

Duvall was driving a Briggs Meat Packing Co. truck Saturday night at Tenth and Liberty streets southwest, when the accident occurred. Negotiating a turn, the truck rolled over, and Duvall was pinned underneath. Removed to Casualty Hospital, he was treated for a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Police said yesterday they believed the driver was traveling too fast to make the turn.

Overturns on Curve.

An overturning car also caused the death of Bailey. The Virginian was killed yesterday morning when his automobile failed to make a sharp curve near Monday Point, 30 miles south of Colonial Beach, Va. He was employed in the Bank of Westmoreland, at Colonial Beach, and was returning to Kinsale, across an inlet from Monday Point, to visit his father, Robert M. Bailey, when the accident occurred.

Among the injured was Mary Jarboe, 17, of 376 Twelfth street northeast, who received lacerations to the face, concussions, and a possible skull fracture, in a motor car accident at Riverdale, Md. The Bladensburg Rescue Squad took her to Casualty Hospital, where her condition was reported serious last night.

Raymond E. Allen, 24, of 348 Raleigh street southeast, was at Providence Hospital last night with a fractured left hand and several cuts on the body. He was hurt in an accident on Marlboro pike between Forestville and Meadows, Md.

Leonard Keller, 41, of Waldorf, Md., and two daughters, Frances and Clara Keller, were injured at Bryantown, Md., when their car collided with another driven by William Henderson, colored, 40, of Clinton, Md. All were taken to Casualty Hospital for treatment. Keller was in a serious condition last night, his injuries consisting of concussions, fracture, of the left shoulder and possible internal injuries. Frances, 9, suffered a fractured right shoulder, and Clara, 5, had a possible skull fracture and cuts. The girls were not considered seriously hurt. Henderson suffered lacerations to the head and face.

Hip Is Fractured.

Addie L. Johnson, 19, of 1349 Emerson street northwest, received a fractured right hip in an accident in the 3,800 block of Alabama street southeast. She was riding in a car driven by Sheldon S. Cline, of Falls Church, Va. Their car was in collision with one driven by John R. Hockman, of Hillside, Md. Miss Johnson was treated at Casualty Hospital. Last night her condition was reported good.

Virginia Slater, 18, or 1624 Minnesota avenue northeast, was injured in a collision in the 4000 block of Connecticut avenue. Taken to Emergency Hospital she was treated for cuts and bruises. She was not seriously hurt.

Harvey Windsor, of Landover, Md., was the victim of a hit-and-run driver. He was struck early yesterday morning while walking on Largo road, near Bladensburg. Sergt. Ralph Brown, of Prince Georges County police, took him to Casualty Hospital, where he was treated for a broken leg.

Miss Alice Whitney, 18-year-old daughter of Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, and Miss Constance Shepard, 17, were released from Emergency Hospital yesterday after they had been treated for injuries received in an automobile accident near Chantilly, Va., Saturday.

Neither girl was hurt seriously, although Miss Shepard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Shepard, of New York, was at first believed to have received a skull fracture. Both girls are students at Foxcroft School at Middleburg, Va.

The occupants of the second car, Mr. and Mrs. E. Arnold, of McLean, Va., were still in the hospital. Arnold received a broken arm and severe cuts. Mrs. Arnold suffered a fractured thigh.

Killed in Collision.

Cambridge, Md., June 13 (AP).—One young man was killed and another was injured in a collision of their automobile with a truck a deputy sheriff said had been taken out by a youth without its owner's knowledge.

Harry Jefferson, 24-year-old Easton drug store employe, died a few minutes after the collision about 1:30 a. m. on the East New Market-Preston road near the Eastern Shore Hospital.

Jefferson and his companion, Homer Cornelius, of Washington, D. C., were hurried to the Cambridge Maryland Hospital.

Jefferson died soon after reaching the hospital and physicias held little hope that Cornelius would recover.

Elmira, N. Y., June 13 (AP).—Police sought to solve the mystery today of an explosion which demolished the house of Otto Gutberleg yesterday and seriously injured his wife and a visitor.

The force of the blast left the two-story frame cottage a mass of debris and blew Mrs. Gutberleg, 27, through the kitchen door out on the rear lawn. The visitor, Conrad Pankau, 30, who was in the cellar when the explosion occurred, was thrown against the foundation wall and managed to crawl through a cellar window to safety. Farley Begins Drive on Bogus Life Protection legitimate life insurance companies, according to Farley.

Literature of the organizations stresses the point that no medical examination is required for membership, and appeals especially to "those persons who, because of advanced age or physical infirmities, cannot obtain any form of life protection."

For a monthly contribution of from $1 to $1.50, elderly persons—many of whom are suffering chronic complaints unknown to them—are led to believe that their beneficiaries will receive sums ranging from $1,000 to $5,000.

One society alone has cost the public upward of $2,000,000 in the past four years, only 20 per cent of which was paid back in benefits, according to the Postoffice Department.

Added impetus to the drive, which will be made by the postal inspection service, was given by penitentiary sentences recently meted out to Angus C. Littlejohn, of Springfield, Ill., and to Charles E. Hill, of Lake Charles, La., both of whom were convicted for using the mails to defraud in connection with allegedly spurious life protection organizations.

New Rule Bars D. C. Requests For CCC Jobs

Changes in the rules governisg selections of war veterans for emergency work aimed at ending the practice of former servicemen coming to Washington just prior to enrollment periods in the Civilian Conservation Corps were announced yesterday by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs.

In the future, the announcement said, transient veterans desiring to enroll in the veterans' contingent of the CCC will be required to submit application to the Veterans' Administration manager having jurisdiction over territory in which the applicant maintains a permanent address.

Provisions of the new instructions, it was pointed out, make it necessary for transient veterans to return to their place of permanent address before they may be enrolled in the CCC.

The instructions were issued, it was said, after consideration by Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, Gen. Hines and other Government officials.

Quotas have been established for each region, and in cases where the number of applicants exceeds the number of places to be filled, the overflow will be advised to register with the local office of the United States Employment Service, Gen. Hines said.

Wife Believes Quacks Lured Husband Away

Legless War Veteran Vanishes From Home With $1,900.

Steve Aspergis, 43-year-old legless World War veteran, disappeared from his home, 1212 K street northwest, yesterday with $1,900 in bills and a note for $1,000 in his pockets.

Police joined the search when Mrs. Vera Aspergis, his wife, said she felt her husband had been the victim of a plot and enticed from home by a foreigner "who told him how he can get cured."

Aspergis has been a hopeless cripple, suffering an incurable malady for ten years. Specialists at Mount Alto Veterans' Hospital have performed 11 operations in attempts to cure him but so far all efforts have been futile.

Mrs. Aspergis said her husband has been despondent recently because doctors have told him they will have to amputate his arms. He lost one leg in 1932 and the other last year.

Reporters were told yesterday by the woman that her husband was seen talking to a "foreigner" Saturday night.

When she asked Steve who the visitor was, Mrs. Aspergis said, she was told that the stranger "was telling me how I can get cured."

The woman said yesterday she had scoffed at her husband's hopes and told him of the futile attempts made by Army surgeons to rid him of the dreaded Burgis disease which he contracted during the war.

Returning from mass at St. Patrick's Church about 12:45 p. m. yesterday, Mrs. Aspergis said she was unable to locate her husband. He had left their boarding house room, taking with him two suitcases and all his belongings.

Aspergis, Saturday night, had asked his wife how far it was to Norfolk, Va., and the cost of a railroad ticket there.

The crippled man, who walks with the aid of artificial legs and crutches, had with him, when he left, the proceeds of the sale of a home in New York City, Mrs. Aspergis said. She said the money belonged to her father.

Detective Sergt. Howard Ogle said that a neighbor had seen the veteran enter a taxicab alone shortly before his wife returned from church.

Tracing the cab, Ogle learned that the passenger was taken to Union Station, where a redcap disclosed he had aided a lone crippled man board a train for Cleveland. Mrs. Aspergis said she formerly lived there.

Bandits Hold Up Filling Station, Store, Cabmen

Get Sums Up to $105 Despite Street Patrol by Detectives.

Despite the fact that the Chief of detectives and more than ten detectives patrolled the streets Saturday night and early yesterday, armed bandits held up a filling station, a grocery store and two cab drivers.

Bernard W. Thompson, detective chief, could not be reached yesterday to comment on the increasing number of robberies that have occurred during the past few weeks.

Gilbert D. Siron, 24, 1318 Trinidad avenue northeast, manager of a gasoline station at 2918 Rhode Island avenue northeast, was robbed of $105 early yesterday by two armed white men.

Siron told police both men, armed with revolvers, entered the station about 4:30. They took the money from the cash register and escaped in a black coupe.

A lone colored man escaped with $40 in bills after he held up Mrs. Anna Decklebaum, 1468 T street northwest. She said the man had a gun.

George Kline, 212 G street northwest, a cab driver, told police he was robbed of $4.40 early yesterday by two men who hired him in the 3200 block Prospect avenue northwest.

Kline said the men hailed his cab and when he stopped threatened him with a gun.

John Henry Hughes, colored cab driver, lost $5 to an armed bandit when he was hailed at Eighth and K streets northwest by a white man. The man drew a gun at Thirteenth and K streets, Hughes said, demanding the money.

Mrs. Dockweiler had been a frequent visitor in the Capital, her husband for 25 years having been Democratic national comitteeman for California.

Surviving, in addition to the Representative, are five sons, Superior Court Judge George Dockweiler, Thomas and Henry Dockweiler, well-known attorneys; Dr. Robert Dockweiler, a physician, and Lieut. Edward Dockweiler, U. S. N.; and three sisters, Mrs. William K. Young, Mrs. Marcus Crahan and Mrs. C. Q. Brady. All live in California.

Condemned Murderer Sneers at Hanging

Spokane, Wash., June 13 (AP).—Stanley Knapp, 19-year-old convicted murderer, laughed at a death sentence today.

"Tell 'em we're soaking our necks in salty brine to get ready for the rope," he said as he and his brother, Le Roy, 21, were sentenced to death on the gallows for the killing of William A. Walker during a bank robbery.

3 Fliers Die in Crash Of California Airplane

Pasadena, Calif., June 13 (AP).—Three persons were killed today when a light biplane crashed near here. Sheriff officers said the dead were E. M. Patrick, Alhambra; Fred Lobb, Pasadena, and Frank Bannister, Monterey Park. One witness said a wing crumpled, causing the crash of the plane.

Navy Will 'Shop' This Week For Two Modern Battleships

35,000-Ton Craft to Be First in Almost 15 Years; Bids on One to Be Opened Thursday; Government Will Build Other.

By the Associated Press.

The Navy goes shopping this week for two modern battleships—the first to be built for the American fleet in almost 15 years.

Secretary Swanson arranged to open bids Thursday from private shipbuilding companies for the construction of one of the 35,000-ton men o' war. The other will be built in a Navy yard, in accordance with the law, and estimates from those seeking the work already are being studied.

The cost of each battleship, including complete armament and equipment, has been estimated at approximately $55,000,000.

Officers said contracts for both vessels probably will be awarded simultaneously—within a few days after the private bids are unsealed.

They have expressed hope that the keels will be laid not later than July 1.

Bids also will be opened on the same date for two 1,400-ton submarines, comprising half of the 1937 building program for undersea boats. Two others will be allotted to Navy yards. The last submarines contracted for by the Navy cost more than $2,500,000 each.

President Roosevelt gave the order for new battleship construction this winter after Great Britain had announced an ambitious naval rearmament program, including the laying down of five new battleships this year.

Newest ship in the present battleship flotilla of 15 is the West Virginia, which was laid down in 1920 and completed in 1923.

Investment Ban On Holding Firms Studied by SEC

By the Associated Press.

Securities Commission officials indicated yesterday they may ask Congress soon to forbid investment trusts becoming holding companies.

This, it was explained, might be done by putting a percentage limitation on the investments of trusts in other companies.

David Schenker, commission counsel in the investment trust investigation, directed most of his questions in the last week's study of the Goldman Sachs Trading Corporation to the effects of its ownership of controlling interests in 1929 in a $1,694,494,103 empire of banks, investment companies, real estate firms, a public utility, a bus company, a barge line, department stores, and a salmon fishery.

He contended the corporation's obligations to its possessions made it more difficult to weather the 1929 crash, and claimed it lost 90 per cent of its capital in three years.

An indication of the commission's attitude on investment trusts was seen in Schenker's frequent comparison of investment trusts with mutual savings banks. Investment trusts usually are formed with the idea that they enable small investors to pool their savings in a common fund for investment in diversified securities under expert advice and thus make safer and more profitable investments than if they operated individually.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 13 (AP).—The first furniture strike here in 26 years, which kept 1,000 employes of three factories idle for 34 days, was settled today.

George W. Welsh, of a special city conciliation committee, announced the agreement after a ten-hour meeting with Robert W. Irwin, spokesman for the Robert W. Irwin Co., the Macey Co. and the Irwin Seating Co., and Harry Spencer, United Automobile Workers organizer, who has led in unionization of the furniture workers. Group Opposes Lee Boulevard Zoning Scheme

Civic Federation to Fight Program to Permit Apartment Sites.

Any attempt on the part of the county board to zone a section of the right-of-way of the Lee boulevard other than residential A will be met by strong opposition at the meeting today.

The Arlington County Civic Federation went on record favoring that the entire right-of-way of the Lee boulevard should be zoned residential A. As a result of this action a large delegation will attend today's meeting to protest any change.

In addition to the appearance of representatives from the federation, John Nolen, jr., of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, also will attend and, it is learned, will protest anything but residential A along the Lee boulevard.

With the boulevard rerouted from Arlington Ridge road to the bridge, it is known that some officials are in favor of zoning that section B to permit the erection of apartments or a hotel. This section now is zoned light industral and officials contend it is unsuited for home sites.

Safety Drive Urged.

Charging failure on the part of the sheriff's office to enforce existing traffic regulations on the highways of the county, endangering lives and property, the Colonial Village Civic Association has gone on record as favoring a safety campaign during July.

In a resolution directed to Sheriff Howard B. Fields, County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan, William E. A. McShea, chairman of the county board, and Judge B. M. Hedrick, judge of the county court, the board of governors of the organization declared the alleged failure of the sheriff's office to enforce traffic regulations has resulted in an increase in the number of fatalities in the county.

"The existence of such deplorable conditions calls for concerted action on the part of the residents, the law-enforcement officers and the judiciary of the county," the resolution said in part.

Albert A. Corretta, president of the association, says that he will send a copy of the resolution to I. Chance Buchanan, president of the Arlington County Civic Federation, with the request that a special meeting of the county-wide group be called to consider concerted action. He also said he will send copies of the resolution to presidents of other associations for appropriate action.

Parade Set for Today.

A parade of Arlington Post, American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, will be held today in observance of Flag Day to open the legion fiesta to be held on the legion grounds tonight and through the week at Clarendon.

The entertainment features of the fiesta have been arranged by a former entertainment director of the American Expeditionary Forces who staged a carnival at Brest after the armistice.

Knights of Garter, Old British Order, Will Meet Today

London, June 13 (AP).—The most ancient surviving order of chivalry, the Order of the Garter, will gather at Windsor tomorrow to revive an old ceremony last celebrated 23 years ago.

The absence of one knight and attendance of a new member will bring a reminder of the most recent chapter in the history of British royalty to the colorful scene, enacted in St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle.

The Duke of Windsor's stall will be empty when the other blue-mantled knights take their place. The new Earl Baldwin of Bewdley, "Baldwin the Kingmaker," will be there, attending his first Garter service.

When the knights assemble King George, as head of the order, will bestow insignia on the new members, fastening the garter on each knight's left leg.

Hitler's Companion Alleged to Be a Jew

Paris, June 13 (U.P.).—Leni Rieffenstahl, red-haired German actress who for two years has been going about with Adolf Hitler, has been publicly denounced as a Jewess by Der Fuehrer's prpoganda minister, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, the Paris Soir said tonight.

Goebbels, fiery Jew-baiter of the Nazi regime, was said by the newspaper to have announced during a social event at the home of Minister of Interior Wilhelm Frick that he had documentary proof of Mish Riefinstahl's Jewish blood.

"I am leaving," Goebbels announced in a loud voice to the guests, "because there is a person here who is not Aryan."

The guests were stupefied, the Paris Soir said, when Goebbels continued:

"I have with me documents showing that Leni Rieffenstahl had Semetic grandparents.

Leni was said to have been in the room and to have been asked by Frick to leave.

The tax plan of the Young Men's Democratic Club was urged as making possible a 50 per cent reduction in town taxes by the club. It declared in the resolution that members of the religious group take advantage of other civic rights and that the right to pay taxes should be included.

Bankhead Tenant Bill Is Favored

By the Associated Press.

Francis Pickens Miller, president of the Southern Policy Association, suggested yesterday substitution of the Bankhead farm tenancy bill for the House Agriculture Committee's farm security measure.

He said credit and mortgage provisions of the House bill would decrease rather than increase farm security, and that the farm tenancy bill by Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, authorizing purchase of farm land was preferable.

The Senate Agriculture Committee has approved the Bankhead measure.

Miller said that if legislation employing the purchase and resale method could not be obtained now, a delay would be better than approval of the House Agriculture Committee's bill.

"It seems not unlikely," Miller said, "that if the proposed 'farm security act of 1937' is approved containing the credit-mortgage provision, a large portion of the $50,000,000 allocated will go down the rat-hole of speculative land racketeers."

The statement was signed by about 40 persons. They included James W. Angell, of Columbia; Fred R. Fairchild, of Yale, and Edwin W. Kemmerer, of Princeton.

Norris Predicts End of 2-Unit State Assembly

Says Others Will Follow Lead of Nebraska; Answers Critics.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, who fostered America's only unicameral Legislature, predicted yesterday two-house lawmaking bodies would be abolished in many States.

The Nebraska Legislature ended its first unicameral session a few weeks ago.

Taking stock of its work yesterday, the snowy haired Senator said the Legislature demonstrated its "great superiority" over the old two-house type, although he admitted ruefully:

"It did not pass some laws I would have liked to have seen it pass; and it passed other laws which I wish it had not passed."

"When the work of this Legislature has been fully understood and analyzed," he added, "it will have its influence upon many other States.

"In time it will result in the abolishment of the old two-house Legislature, with its powerful and indefensible conference committee, in many States besides Nebraska."

The conference committee—an indispensable feature of every two-house legislative body—has been a prime reason for Norris' 20-year crusade for a unicameral system.

Conferences Nullify Bills.

When a Senate and House fail to agree on a bill, it is sent to a conference committee for an ironing out of differences. Behind this group's closed doors, the Nebraska Senator contends, lobbyists find their happy hunting ground.

All too often, he said, the committee will "nullify the work of both Houses by putting a lot of jokers in the law."

"There has not been an instance during the session where the Legislature could have indulged in the familiar dodge of 'passing the buck' from one house to another and from both houses to the conference committee," he declared.

"Everything has been done in the open and * * * the record of every member is thoroughly understood by the people."

Answers Critics.

Acknowledging "there has been considerable criticism" of the unicameral Legislature, Norris asserted some of it was "without any foundation whatever."

To the chief complaints of its critics, he gave these answers:

1. It appropriated more money than any preceding Legislature—"This is perfectly natural. The distress into which the depression plunged the country made increased appropriations necessary * * * I have not yet heard anyone point out any appropriation that is dishonest, dishonorable or reprehensible."

2. It lacked party leadership, since it was elected on a nonpartisan ballot—"We want to get rid of party leadership; we want to divorce the legislative proceedings of the State entirely from party promises, party pledges, party deceptions, party intrigues."

3. "There were more lobbyists buzzing around the legislative halls than ever before."—"Lobbyists were compelled to appear publicly * * * That such organizations should have a fair opportunity to be heard is essential."

Donovan Joins Chest Workers

Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, yesterday was added to the list of veteran Community Chest workers who will comprise the campaign committee of the "united front" tenth anniversary drive this year. Acceptance by Donovan of membership on the committee was announced by Clarence Phelps Dodge, Chest president.

A group of Washington's leading men, all of whom are veterans in the service, have formed a campaign committee with President Dodge as titular chairman and William J. Flather, jr., as vice chairman. The original campaign committee consisted of a group of 25. It was announced at the time that other veterans would be added and Donovan is the first addition. Donovan has served in various capacities with the Government unit and has been especially effective as a member of the speakers' unit.

Gains 38% Over 1933; Living Cost's Rise Reported 8%.

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday the national income totaled $62,056,000,000 in 1936, or $7,411,000,000 over 1935.

Officials predicted the figure would reach $70,000,000,000 this year.

Since the 1933 depression low, the report said, the national income has bounded upward more swiftly than prices, producing "a much-enlarged real purchasing power of individuals."

From 1933 to 1936, it continued, the national income climbed 38 per cent, while the cost of living advanced only 8 per cent.

The report listed per capita income of employes last year at $1,244—$58 over 1935 and 88.4 per cent of the 1929 figure.

At $41,250,000,000 last year, total compensation to employes increased 14 per cent over 1935 and was 66.5 per cent of aggregate national income. The labor share of total national income in 1936 was the highest on record, comparing with 66.4 per cent of the total in 1935 and 65.5 in 1929.

Dividends last year totaled $4,573,000,000, about 50 per cent over the preceding year, but 23 per cent under 1929. Dividends comprised 7.4 per cent of the national income last year, compared with 5.6 in 1935 and 7.6 in 1929.

Among individual producers of income in 1936, the largest was manufacturing, which provided $14,253,000,000. The Government was next with $9,243,000,000, inclusive of work-relief wages.

The income figures were for "income paid out"—that paid for wages, dividends, interest, royalties, rent and similar costs. "Income produced"—the net value of all commodities produced and services rendered during the year—totaled $63,799,000,000 in 1936, or $1,143,000,000 more than income paid out.

New Union Expects 50,000 Ford Men

Detroit, June 13 (AP).—The Workers' Council for Social Justice, new labor union here, today invited all industrial workers to become members and its officers asserted that "frankly we expect 50,000 Ford workers to join our ranks."

Observers here regarded formation of the incorporated union as a new complication in the campaign of the United Automobile Workers of America to organize the 9,300 Ford Motor Co. employes in suburban Dearborn.

George F. Addes, U. A. W. A. secretary-treasurer, said the new union "smacks of Coughlinism." Father Charles E. Coughlin, founder of the National Union for Social Justice, could not be reached for comment.

Mayors' Chief Hits 40-60 WPA Split

By the Associated Press.

Paul V. Betters, executive director of the United States Conference of Mayors, said yesterday Senate proposals to shift 40 per cent of the relief burden to State and local communities would mean "collapse" of the Federal relief policy.

Betters declared in a statement that adoption of the proposal, backed by a majority of the Senate Appropriations Committee, would also mean "abrogation of a contract and pledge entered into by the cities and States with the Federal Government." The relief bill, carrying appropriation of $1,500,000,000, is expected to reach the Senate floor tomorrow. It has cleared the House.

"Since 1935 it has been accepted that the proper division of responsibility for meeting the relief problem in this country was that the Federal Government should take care of the employable relief cases and the cities and States should provide aid to the unemployables," Betters said.

Dirigible Value As Industrial Raider Stressed

Westover Says Craft Could Be Used Effectively Against U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, believes dirigibles can be used "very effectively" against United States industrial areas during mobilization for any future war.

In an appearance before a Senate military affairs subcommittee which is studying a bill to permit exportation of helium, Westover said the big sky-raiders can be "a very decisive factor in the initial stages of defense."

Westover was disclosed yesterday to have told the committee that the War Department approved exportation of the gas for "humanitarian, scientific or strictly commercial airship purposes" in peacetime.

In wartime, however, Westover added, "it would not make much difference whether you have helium or hydrogen—if you are going to accomplish your military mission you are going to sacrifice everything."

In case of an enemy invasion of this country, Westover said, airships, operating in adverse weather conditions, "skimming along above the clouds," could easily spot and bomb power stations, disrupting power transmission, manufacturing and transportation.

Invading enemy airships, guided by observers in "cloud cars" hanging 2,000 feet below the dirigible would pick out the power plant as their bombing objective.

"When you consider the relatively few electrical plants in the northeastern area of this country, one appreciates the crippling destruction of those plants alone will probably do as much as anything else to delay mobilization.

Another Squeeze Play?

Maj. L'Enfant never heard the crack of horsehide on hardwood, and may be pardoned for failing to provide, in his plan of Washington, for baseball diamonds instead of the formal circles that interrupt the city's through traffic routes. The major, of course, was providing park space for the types of recreation considered decorous for residents of a Capital in the late eighteenth century, as depicted for us in quaint contemporary prints of children steering sailboats or young ladies with military escorts.

Small formal parks may meet the needs of other national capitals. Londoners like to turn from Whitehall to watch the guards parade in St. James Park, and Parisians relish their speritifs best in view of the trees along the Champs Elysees. But small boys and other baseball devotees in Washington are discouraged from their normal spring pastime, except in our larger parks, by the danger that a granite general will field their flies, or that wild throws may be soaked at the feet of chastely draped nymphs.

Maj. L'Enfant's plan was partially brought up to date when baseball diamonds were laid out on the Ellipse, where eighteenth century planners probably visualized a parade ground. This living use of our central parks would have delighted Thomas Jefferson, who rejected the empty pomp of the aristocracy he displaced as emphatically as he warned of the dangers of future urban congestion. But architectural royalists now plan to memorialize his name in a form of grandeur alien to his spirit. Local unorganized baseball must keep its eye on the ball lest another squeeze play steal the Ellipse as well as the Tidal Basin for marble rather than for men.

Japan's Trade Balance.

The grave stresses and strains to which the Japanese economic system is being subjected are brought out in the revelation that, so far this year, Japan has an adverse trade balance of 631,000,000 yen. This is the largest adverse balance Japan has recorded for any comparable period.

By no means all the factors contributing to this excess of imports over exports are actually unfavorable. The first half of the year is normally the period when Japanese firms replenish their stocks; it is the period, therefore, when Japan almost invariably buys far more than she sells. And with prices rising, business men of the island empire are doubtless buying for future as well as immediate needs. Moreover, the very circumstance that Japanese firms are adding to their stocks is an indication that no slowing down in the rate of industrial production is anticipated.

There is, however, another side of the picture. Because of rising raw material prices, Japan's costs of production are also going up, with the result that Japanese manufacturers may lose some of the competitive advantage over their foreign rivals which they had in the days when raw material prices were slumping. If, therefore, the Japanese industrial machine is to continue functioning at top speed, greater efforts than ever will have to be made to dispose of Japanese goods in world markets. Yet, at the same time, the trend in many parts of the world during the last several years has been in the direction of placing added barriers in the way of cheaply-made Japanese goods.

Thus Japan faces the end of a boom period which began five years ago with the sharp devaluation of the yen. Through further rationalization of industry, through special trade arrangements with individual countries and efforts further to reduce costs of production, the industrial leaders of Japan may be able to prolong the boom. But it will not be an easy task.

The rationalization program in Japanese industry has about reached the point of diminishing returns. The negotiation of special trade pacts is beset with great obstacles. And any attempt to reduce production costs further, say by lowering wages, is certain to lead to grave social disturbances since the cost of living in Japan is going up rapidly. The decided gains made by the Social Masses party in the last general election shows that discontent among Japanese workers is increasing.

For the time being the threat to Japan's economy embodied in the sharp increase in the adverse balance of trade is more potential than actual. Yet the situation revealed by this trend has its disturbing possibilities, both for Japan and for the rest of the world which, of late, has increasingly felt the impact of Japanese competition.

An Inflationary Proposal.

Last week Senator Thomas introduced a bill authorizing the issuance of currency against unpledged gold now held in the Treasury or hereafter acquired. The proposed measure is designed to reverse the sterilization policy which the Treasury has followed since the end of last December. It then abandoned the practice of paying for gold through issuance of gold certificates to the Federal Reserve banks and began to sell Government securities against newly acquired gold placed in an inactive fund. Senator Thomas appears to be more than a little hazy about the reasons for the Treasury's action. He talks as if the change of policy were the result of compulsion instead of being a deliberate anti-inflationary move.

Representative Dies, co-author of the silver purchase act whose repeal is being urged today by a representative group of economists as a threat to currency stability, is likewise advocating a reversal of the sterilization program. He is working on the draft of a bill that would compel the Treasury to finance all gold purchases by issuing so-called gold certificates for general circulation. By such means he thinks that "cash" money would be gradually substituted for "credit" money, gold would be rehabilitated and the taxpayers would be spared the expense of paying interest on bonds issued to pay for gold.

Mr. Dies presents his plan in a more coherent fashion than does Senator Thomas and he shows a clearer understanding of the Treasury's objectives. He mistakenly assumes, however, that the certificates which he proposes to issue would remain in circulation and take the place of other credit forms of payment. Actually, of course, they would pile up in the banks in the form of cash deposits and swell the excess reserves which the Treasury has been trying by various means to cut down.

The dangerous implications of these plans to upset the sterilization program are best realized by considering the effects of the Treasury's earlier policy. From the time of the establishment of the stabilization fund at the beginning of 1934 to the end of 1936 approximately $4,000,000,000 of gold was acquired and paid for with funds obtained from the Federal Reserve banks against gold certificates. The result was to add an equal amount to member bank deposits and reserves and to build up excess reserves at an alarmingly rapid rate.

The Federal Reserve authorities have tried to counteract the inflationary potentialities of this unprecedented gold inflow by raising member bank reserve requirements and by setting up an inactive gold fund with the aid of borrowed money. Senator Thomas' proposal would put a stop to the latter practice. It would also undo all that has been done to sterilize superfluous gold by authorizing the issuance of notes against approximately $900,000,000 of gold held in the inactive fund at the present time.

Senator Thomas, Representative Dies and their like-minded colleagues belonging to the Congressional inflationary bloc are completely blind or indifferent to the dangers of the present situation. That is strikingly shown in the case of Senator Thomas by his statement that gold is being sent here to pay for the purchase of our automobiles and other things, the balance of trade being in our favor. Reminded by Senator Vandenberg that the merchandise balance for the present year is unfavorable, the Senator from Oklahoma was forced to admit that foreigners were buying our stocks and bonds in quantity and shipping unwanted gold in exchange for these valuable capital assets.

Such an abysmal ignorance of the origins of the problem that confronts the country is most perturbing. There is no indication that Senator Thomas shares the anxiety of those monetary experts who are trying to devise ways of controlling the gold movement that are feasible and not likely to result in fresh evils. There is not a suggestion that the root cause of our present troubles lies in a devaluation of the currency unit which has raised the dollar price of gold unduly and exerted a powerful attraction upon capital fleeing from disturbed political areas.

Gold to Senator Thomas and those of his persuasion simply means more money and more money to his way of thinking is an unmitigated blessing. The more gold loses caste as a monetary metal, the more attractive it becomes to the inflationists. That at least is a logical attitude but it only adds to the anxiety of those to whom gold is fast becoming a "dangerous commodity."

What About It, Miss Mitchell?

Coincident with Margaret Mitchell's announcement in the current New Yorker that she does not contemplate writing a sequel to "Gone With the Wind," comes news that in New York City last week the American Writers Congress gave her novel only one vote when picking the best books for the past year. Apparently neither author nor scribblers' convention is moved by the fact that sales of this Civil War tome have long since passed the millionth mark. Miss Mitchell prefers peace and a long literary lull to continuing the trials of Scarlett and Ashley. The Writers Congress prefers action and the Dos Passos style to ruffles and Rhett.

Next month will be the first anniversary of the writing debut of Margaret Mitchell and the literary birth of Scarlett O'Hara. Neither has had a dull moment since they first appeared on the Southern horizon. Atlanta postmen have done double duty carrying inquiries as to their wealth, health and happiness.

It is to Miss Mitchell's credit that she has done everything she can to answer as many of these questions as possible. But to the most persistent of all, she has no answer whatsoever. If she ever does decide to tell whether Scarlett and Rhett finally got together again, it might be less trouble to write a sequel than to continue her correspondence.

Neurath In Budapest.

The visit to Budapest of Baron Constantin von Neurath, foreign minister of the Third Reich, follows close on the heels of the departure from that capital of the Italian royal party.

Both of the Fascist powers, it is clear, are courting Hungary with the view of keeping it a satisfied member of the German-Italian bloc. But the circumstance that Italian and German statesmen find it necessary to make personal visits to the land of the Magyars would seem to indicate that they do not take Hungary's continued attachment to the Berlin-Rome axis too much for granted.

Now, as at all times during the past decade, Hungary unquestionably regards Italy as a friend and ally. The Magyar government also has every intention of remaining on cordial terms with Germany. But, of late, it has begun to see advantages in cultivating friendlier relations with its more immediate neighbors as well.

One of these neighbors is its old Hapsburg partner, Austria. The other three—Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia—are rivals who have within their borders territory claimed by Hungary as rightfully hers. But, at the moment, the possibility of a revision of the territorial clauses of the Trianon treaty in the interests of Hungary are practically nonexistent. Proof of this is found in the fact that both Italy and Germany have been courting Yugoslavia and Rumania, and that Italy recently signed a treaty with the Belgrade government that confirmed Yugoslavia in its possession of its present territorial holdings.

This is realized by Magyar leaders. They have been tempted, therefore, to lend a favorable ear to the pleas of Austria and of Czechoslovakia for a Magyar-Czechoslovak rapprochement which would pave the way for the establishment of a Danubian economic bloc. Such a development would undoubtedly be of real advantage to Hungary, not least because it would reduce its present dependence on the German market for its surplus farm products.

Since 1929 Hungary's exports to Germany have more than doubled. But this development, far from causing any jubilation in Budapest, has actually been worrying the Magyar leaders. For there has been little profit to Hungary in this trade. Germany has been paying for its imports from the Danubian and Balkan countries in blocked marks so that Hungary, like Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Greece and the other victims of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht's prestidigitory efforts in the field of international trade, have had to take German goods or go without payment for their exports to the Third Reich. Very little free exchange has been vouchsafed them as a result of their expansion of exports to Germany.

The establishment of a Danubian trade bloc, however, would unquestionably have more than economic consequences. It might seriously weaken the Berlin-Rome axis by permitting the Danubian states to pursue a more independent policy than heretofore. No wonder, then, that considerable pressure from Rome and Berlin is being exerted on Hungary, without whose consent the proposed Danubian bloc could not be formed. But the ultimate success of von Neurath's efforts at Budapest as of Count Ciano's before him remain to be seen.

Face Lifting At Franconia.

The Old Man of the Mountain appears to be in dire need of a beautician. That great, weather-beaten stone face at Franconia, N. H., in the White Mountains is beginning to suffer the indignities of age.

Long years ago, wind and rain and frost sculptured a bit of the mountainside overlooking Profile Lake into the outline of a man's face. But there is no sentiment in Nature. The same elements that created the Old Man of the Mountain are now on the verge of destroying him. Another season or two and the silent sentinel of Franconia may be no more, or at least be changed out of all recognition to his former self.

Man, however, is incurably anthropocentric. It is a source of endless wonder to homo sapiens that through a fortuitous arrangement of rocks at Profile Lake something emerges which bears the aspects of a human face. Thousands of visitors have come to Franconia each year to see the curious spectacle. And the possibility that this sight may soon belong to the vanished past is arousing consternation and alarm.

So, to preserve the oddity, man plans to intervene. With the judicious application of iron and cement the brow of the Old Man of the Mountain is to be kept from caving in, the chin from sagging, the nose from tumbling into the valley. And thus future generations of tourists will have the opportunity to gape at Nature's handiwork, which by dint of constant face-lifting will no longer be Nature's but man's.

All of us make mistakes. The other day a patient beat up a psychologist for telling him he had an inferiority complex.

The Greatest Problem.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: There are many grave and important problems which are being attacked by the various governments of the world, problems which are of great national concern in these countries and problems which affect many thousands of people, but there is one problem which it is the duty of every level-headed and intelligent citizen to consider. It is a problem which should be of the deepest concern on the part of every people, regardless of nationality, race, color, or creed. The language which I shall ask pardon for using, but which I believe describes it better than any other is this, "a conflagration of hell," in other words war.

Is there a solution? Is it through increased armaments? If we go by experience in the past the former question is certainly not the answer. Secret treaties, balances of power, and bayonets cannot for long foster peace between nations, but only stimulate suspicion and fear, the nucleus of conflict. What then, may we ask, can be done?

It is the writer's opinion, and I believe others share in this belief, that the most practical and possible answer is an international radio commission established by the various nations of the world and composed of men whose integrity is beyond question. Such a commission, let us say, might be composed of ten men well versed in their specific fields. They might consist of two lawyers, two economists, two gentlemen representing the press, two adroit business men, and two clergymen. It would be their unfailing and trusted duty when various circumstances arise which might tend to initiate friction, to cover the circumstance with the utmost care and study, in order to uncover the true facts and allay any fallacious reports which might otherwise emanate from unscrupulous sources.

By doing this a great step would be made in the elimination of adverse propaganda, a deplorable condition so detrimental during the last war. The commission would report upon their findings factual data through the medium of international radio so that every nation would be informed and aware of just what is going on. Such an arrangement, in my estimation, would help to deplete anxiety and morbid fear which must grip fervently the peoples, especially on the continent, when any trouble such as previously mentioned occurs.

This, of course, is merely a suggestion and a very crude one at that. It would be impossible to treat of a problem so complex in very great detail in so limited a space, but something must be done and done quickly, for if we continue to nourish these huge war machines and lay our preparations for trouble, trouble is just exactly what we'll get, and as I have mentioned before, it can only lead to a virtual inferno on earth, followed by devastating and disastrous consequences.

BENJAMIN R. STICKNEY, JR.
Washington, June 10.

Section 213.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe I am as much against the married women's clause, section 213, as anybody I know, even though I am not affected by it and have nothing to gain or lose.

Those who want to get into the Government service by hook or crook are in favor of anything that would create vacancies and would not care a bit who lost their jobs, provided they could get in. It was not so many years back that these same people sneered at Government positions, as they were doing nicely on the outside, thank you.

"Fire the married women" and "give the people who haven't a job a chance" is the cry heard on all sides. Sure, fire the women, even though they have had years of service after taking a competitive test for their positions. Give their jobs to the people who want Government jobs at any cost. Fire all the brothers and sisters, fathers and sons, uncles and nephews in the Government service. That should create plenty of vacancies. It does not make any difference if they have been working under civil service for 1 year or 20 years. John Doe wants a job. He would prefer it without taking an exam. Put him in one of the New Deal agencies and pay him several hundred dollars more than he would get in an established bureau, then blanket him in. That's what he wants. What does he care who gets fired to make room for him?

The fair thing to do for all concerned is to pass legislation limiting the salary that two people can earn who are living under the same roof. Make that legislation effective the date it is passed. Between $3,000 and $4,000 would be the right figure and everybody, unless he be mighty hard to satisfy, should be pleased and thankful for such a ruling. W. E. D.

Washington, June 10.

The Court Plan Doomed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have noticed several letters from Linn A. E. Gale in the past few weeks, all of them upholding the President in his court stand. Evidently Mr. Gale is as stubborn as the chief sponsor of the court-packing plan, as he will not admit defeat.

The court change idea was doomed from the very beginning simply because it was not needed and not wanted, either by a majority of the people or by a majority of Congress. Especially so now, since the court itself has refuted most of Mr. Roosevelt's arguments. And what if the court has done an about face? All courts, from the very first one, have done just that and no one has thought any the less of them for the change. It takes a lot of courage to admit that one is wrong and only a stubborn, bull-headed person will cling to a mistaken idea after it has been proved wrong. L. A. S.

Washington, June 11.

New Deal Bogging Down?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The impression among liberals is getting stronger every day that the New Deal has bogged down. Those who supported the President at the polls gave him an overwhelming "vote of confidence" because they believed that he had a constructive program of action. Instead of this, we have in Congress and the Administration the utmost confusion and wicked waste of time.

The New Deal has bogged down to the low level where, if we cannot force an issue on reactionary Congressmen, we snicker and try to sneak in the back door hoping to fool them by catches, tricks, gags, stooges, lovely moralistic speeches over the radio, flatulent flagellation and the Odes of Horace. Meanwhile inflation is here already and skyrockets prices of food, clothing and rent while Senators fish, golf, gab, attend pink teas, convene at noon and adjourn at 1 p. m. while meeting three times a week to crack jokes and talk baseball.

Any fool can see that at this rate, the Communists laugh up their sleeve and sit back knowing that capitalism's last hope—reform of itself—things are getting so messed up that they can never be unscrambled. All because of a lack of straight-forward leadership.

ARISTOTLE.

Alexandria, Va., June 10.

He Also Hates Noise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter signed "Fides" in today's paper relative to the unnecessary noise is certainly a true picture of the situation in Washington. I, too, hope The Post will use its influence to quell this abominable nuisance which is one of the greatest health destroyers in this fair city.

There seems to be no effort whatever to curb these awful noises which continue day and night. Why is no attention given to this matter by the civic and religious organizations? There is a regulation against it but it is never enforced. The boys crying papers on Sunday morning were hushed but these hornblowers are allowed to make life miserable. Even in the church the minister's voice is often drowned by the blare of horns. VICTIM.

Washington, June 9.

A Judge Who Wouldn't Resign.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Justice Sutherland's denial of the rumors that he is about to resign is reminiscent of the reluctance of another famous conservative justice in making place for new and younger blood. I refer to Stephen J. Field. In the biography written by Carl Brent Swisher and published by the Brookings Institution, we find the following illuminating account of Justice Field's last years on the Supreme Court:

"Over a long period of years there was persistent rumors in the press and in political circles that Justice Field was about to resign. It was said in 1885 that he planned to resign in 1888 and devote the ensuing years to writing the memoirs of his unusually dramatic life. That he did not resign was attributed to the hostility that developed between him and the President [Grover Cleveland]. He remained on the bench. Gossip has it that a quarrel with President Harrison [the succeeding President] led him to decide to remain on the bench during another Presidential term, and then Grover Cleveland was elected again, with the result that Field determined to sit still another four years.

"People conversant with social life in Washington believed that Mrs. Field was reluctant to give up life there, and that she played a part in preventing her husband's resignation. It is evident that another influence was the fact that he was not to be numbered among those who had served longest on the bench. John Marshall held the record up to that time, but Field had served almost as long. He coveted the record himself."

And then the biographer goes on to record how in the winter of 1896-1897, when Field was past 80, and his physical and mental capacities were rapidly failing, he would often forget the decisions he voted on. A committee of the Supreme Court asked him to resign. But Field, determined to beat Marshall's record, refused. Finally, in McKinley's administration, he handed in his resignation, but to take effect only when he had exceeded Marshall's record by two months!

Justice Field's decision to postpone his retirement from the bench had serious consequences for the people of the United States. For this aged justice was the odd man whose vote swung the decision in the income-tax case, invalidating the income-tax law on a constitutional pretext which in a case in 1796 had been considered and dismissed by a Supreme Court comprising members who had themselves sat in the constitutional convention of 1787 and presumably knew what the framers of the Constitution intended their words to mean. Thus because Justice Field set himself to beat Marshall's record for length of service, the people of the United States and the Government of the United States had to wait 18 years to get the income tax and set their financial house in order.

I am not suggesting that Justice Sutherland is also moved by the ambition to beat Marshall's record. But, like Justice Field, who frankly defined the function of the Supreme Court as "the power of resistance," Justice Sutherland evidently feels that his obstructive power is not yet exhausted. And, judging by the decisions at the final session of the Supreme Court, when in the words of one of our commentators, "the court gave the New Deal power program three swift kicks," it would seem as if this were only too true.

The Loyal Southerners

NEVER before in the South's history has there been such a widespread effort to examine this region's assets and liabilities in an objective, scientific manner. Men are delving into corners which have grown up in cobwebs. Ideas, customs, traditions, methods are being re-examined. The physical scientist, the political scientist, the social scientist are focusing their microscopes on a variety of problems.

Often the pictures produced are not pretty by any means. They are not what we should like the South to be. Some of these pictures based on the cold, impartial facts, are far different from the roseate pictures of the South which wishful thinking and a sentimental weakness have lulled us into seeing. Like the individual who is recalled to realities from the midst of a day-dream, we are apt to become annoyed.

Some people not only show their irritation, but in order to return hastily to their dreams would banish the realities by labeling them with some convenient term which would eliminate all necessity for thought or action. That is the reaction of many individuals to frank, objective discussions of some of the South's major problems today. They are convinced that the South is the best place on this globe in which to live, and having established that premise they jump to the next, which is, "There is no necessity for improving something already acknowledged to be the best."

The South is in many respects the best place on this globe in which to live. But in comparison to its potentialities, it does not rank so high.

One of the most convenient devices used by those who have a tendency to resort to defense mechanism is to impute to those who "criticize" the South some sinister or dishonest motive. The practice is a relic of bygone days when the only critics were Yankees. The irritation caused by those who came to gloat over the ravages of defeat and remained to carp is understandable.

But those who are the most vigorous on the one hand in pointing out the deficiencies of the South and in offering suggested methods by which these deficiencies may be overcome on the other are not Yankees. They are men who love the South not only for what it has been, and is, but above all for what it can be.

Those who would condemn such men as "foreign" critics, or who would interpret their findings as evidence of a dislike of the South are reacting in a childish and petty manner. To set about criticizing in a constructive fashion an institution, a custom or a region does not imply a dislike of that institution, custom or region. It can mean, and very often does mean, that the individual is motivated by a love that is stronger and more courageous than that of those who would scoff at him.

Suppose two brothers own a barn which one claims is in need of repair, but which the other contends needs only a new coat of whitewash. The first insists that it will be necessary to go in and put in new foundation timbers and to tear out rotting planks and replace them. The second maintains that the barn is as good as it ever was and that a few gallons of whitewash daubed here and there will suffice.

The brother who is willing to admit that the barn is in need of fundamental repair has a greater interest in its future soundness than the one who would be satisfied with improving the appearance of its exterior.

The same analogy, we contend, is true of the South as a region. Those who pay lip service to the South, a very cheap form of tribute, incidentally, and one which does not require a great deal of effort, may console themselves with the thought that they are its true sons. But the South will not benefit as much from those as from that other gentry which is willing to accept any criticism made in good faith and to proceed on the basis of facts—cherishing lovely sentiments, to be sure, but recognizing them as such.

Still Around the Corner.

Television is around the corner, explained Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, president, and Don Gilman, vice president of the National Broadcasting Co., but it is not the next corner, nor a simple one. It has already arrived in the laboratory and it will arrive "on the air." But not this year or next, and not ever in just the way you have anticipated it.

There will be no national hookups, within any time with which you need to reckon, and local programs will reach no farther away than you could see a searchlight on a clear night on the studio roof. Manufacturers will not dare put expensive receiving sets on the market (they will be expensive) until they are sure they have found the provisional last word in transmission sets. The oldest and most primitive sound receiving set is still exactly as good as it ever was, to hear the most powerful and the most modern transmitting station.

In television, a change in the transmitting apparatus would put all the receiving sets irreparably out of commission. So the receivers must not be put on the market until the senders have reached relative permanence. Then it can be done, locally. You can see the pictures, and they will be good. But a program from New York to San Francisco would cost $3,000,000 for the cable alone.

Fair Enough

Labor And The C. I. O.

SENATOR GUFFEY BLAMES the steel trouble on the refusal of three companies to sign contracts with the C. I. O. and, granting only for the sake of argument that this is so, the justification for this refusal is obvious. The justification is that a contract with the C. I. O. isn't worth a damn, and won't be until the law provides some penalty in case of repudiation by the C. I. O.

In fact, no contract with any union is worth any more than a treaty with Mussolini, nor will be until there is mutual responsibility, as there must be in any contract that is a contract.

Under present conditions the employer is bound to observe the agreement down to the last comma and concede all borderline cases to avoid penalties, including, possibly, a term in jail. But a union has no more responsibility than a cyclone, and a leader who may be a thief or a dictator on the rise, with ambitions to emulate Stalin, Trotsky or the Duce, may treat a contract as a scrap of paper if it suits his convenience to do so.

Suppose the C. I. O. does break a contract dictated by its own representatives and backed on one side by the law, the Government and the employer's property and on the other side by nothing. Who is going to do what to whom? Nobody is going to do anything to anybody.

So why should any employer sign a contract with the C. I. O. if he doesn't have to? Senator Guffey proposes a rather wide investigation of the steel strikes, but while they are at it the statesmen could do much worse than inquire into the affairs of labor in general with an eye to coercion, extortion and the unofficial but inescapable income tax which is levied on the earnings of nominally free American workmen by labor unions to which many of them have no desire to belong.

• • • •

THIS INCOME TAX falls heavily on a class of people in brackets so humble that the Federal Government deems them too poor to contribute, and this is not to quarrel with their exemption. But if Mr. Guffey were to pursue the matter he undoubtedly would find many employes earning as little as $18 or $20 a week and exempt from the income tax, whose right to earn a small living has ceased to be a right and become a concession sold by private organizations having no responsibility for their actions.

There is no ground for criticizing the voluntary payment of dues to labor unions by people who want to belong, but when membership becomes a necessity preliminary ot employment, then the dues are not voluntary payments but extortion, or at least a tax.

Has Congress ever passed a law granting private organizations the right to impose a private tax or a licensing power by which the citizen may be barred from employment until he pays $500 on the barrel head?

• • • •

SENATOR GUFFEY might find in the course of a general investigation of union affairs that the rank and file workman has very little voice in the business of his union, but is whipped around by professional leaders who are experts in their line and the masters of parliamentary tricks which nullify the rights of the individual.

He might discover that the obstreperous member who wants his rights and insists on asking questions of an embarrassing nature is subject to slugging, indistinguishable from the slugging that pickets complain of in riots with the cops, and that a man who won't pipe down can be overlooked in the distribution of jobs and, like an unruly cop, assigned to a job many miles from his home, though other jobs lie closer.

The public courts have been in some dispute, the more so since Mr. Roosevelt began his campaign against the prestige of the Supreme Court, but that seems to be no excuse for the establishment of private courts in labor unions with the right to inflict severe financial penalties on reluctant members even up to permanent banishment from the occupations for which they have been trained.

If the public courts are sometimes crooked, what standard of fairness and honesty can anyone expect in private courts dominated by labor leaders with no legal responsibility of their acts?

If Senator Guffey were to extend his investigation of the steel strike he might find that the union members now need the Government's protection against union dictation as badly as they ever needed laws to protect them from unscrupulous employers.

He might find ruthless dictatorships robbing the children of the workers and courts inflicting punishments, all without responsibility, under the protection of the United States Government and in the guise of altruistic labor leadership.

It is worth looking into.

Honorary Degrees for 1937.

Scrapple, Thaddeus Z. (statesman, legislator and square-shooter)—Although trained in the American school of statesmanship and accustomed to the idea of nicking the citizenry by fair means or foul, the recent spectacle of State and country grabbing a lion's share of a sweepstake winning, while at the same time holding sweepstakes an illegal and wholly immoral enterprise, so disgusted you that you registered embarrassment in four dimensions. As the State and Federal governments swooped down on the street sweeper and filched 50 per cent of his prize while muttering platitudes on the moralities, you had the good grace to extend the poor sap your sympathies, indorse his views on hypocrisy and give him a cigar. This instance of a man in public life repudiating the idea of never giving a sucker a break distinguishes you an outstanding citizen of 1937.

Noggins, Gregory D. With a cry of "Stop! The audience came here to see the feature picture!" you cut the bunk and told the projector operator that if he ever annoyed the audience again you would fire him. Nothing on today's list of honorary degrees is too good for you. And will you state whether you want yours served hot or cold?

It is also to your credit that you never took any stock in the absurd idea that reckless driving can be cut down by tacking posters on telegraph posts. We award you the degree of doctor of horse sense, and will you have a beer?

Spain At The League Of Nations

Complaint Strengthen London Committee's Hand.

By C. Poznanski.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

WHEN Alvarez del Vayo formally asked the Secretariat of the League of Nations to place the Spanish appeal on the agenda of the May meeting of the Council, the first reaction, both in Paris and in London, was distinctly unfavorable. The foreign offices were afraid that the publicity of a League debate would upset the applecart of diplomatic negotiations. They feared that they would be obliged to make clear their position in face of the overwhelming proofs of German and Italian intervention presented by the Spanish government.

French and British quarters in Geneva did not hesitate to declare that the Spanish action was politically unwise and that it could have only a damaging effect on the progress of negotiations for the withdrawal of volunteers and for a mediation in Spain.

The day the council opened, the atmosphere changed. English spokesmen explained that there never was any question of mediation, that a debate at the Council would only strengthen the hand of the powers which are struggling in the London committee for the withdrawal of "volunteers." French spokesmen said much the same thing. And in the speeches at the Council table nobody challenged the right of the Spanish government to appeal to the Council of the League, notwithstanding the existence of the London committee for nonintervention.

Powers Could Not Overlook Covenant.

THIS CHANGE of attitude can be explained on two grounds.

First of all, it is very difficult for the French and British governments, which both officially base their policy on fidelity to the Covenant, to oppose openly a League intervention. Secondly, after Del Vayo's visit to Paris they were satisfied that the Spanish government would not ask fo raction though it was entitled to do so by the text of the Vovenant.

The debate before the League thus became a purely formal affair, the onus of action remaining with the London committee.

The resolution passed unanimously at the end of the meeting clearly charged the nonintervention committee to continue its work for the withdrawal of all "non-Spanish combatants."

So this League debate will have no immediate practical consequences.

If, theoretically, the League remains competent in the Spanish affair and has recognized its international significance, practically the responsibility for action rests with the London committee on which Spain is not represented. And the record of this committee from August, 1936, until now, is not very hopeful.

Del Vayo Protested Two Statements by Eden.

IT WAS very significant, that Del Vayo in accepting the resolution was obliged to protest politely, but firmly, against two statements, made by Mr. Eden in his speech. The first was the statement that the nonintervention scheme had been successful in improving condtions in the Spanish war by diminishing foreign intervention.

Del Vayo pointed out that it was precisely between the Council meetings in December and in May that the Italian army arrived in Spain. Secondly, Del Vayo protested aganst the use of the expression used by Eden "both parties in Spain." He insisted that the Spanish government could not accept being put on the same footing as those responsible for a military rebellion fostered by foreign aid.

Nevertheless, a careful study of the resolution and of the proceedings of the Council shows that the Spanish government succeeded in scoring some important points.

For example, the evidence of Italian intervention in Spain, contained in the White Book is now an official League document. It has been distributed to all member states and the Spanish government may at any moment revert to this evidence and ask the League to act accordingly.

One effect of this evidence is shown already by the text of the resolution of the Council. This resolution no longer refers to "volunteers," but to "non-Spanish combatants" in Spain.

"Volunteers" In Spain Now A Problem For League.

MOREOVER, the withdrawal of foreign troops from Spain is now a concern of the League as well as of the nonintervention committee. The resolution not only "expresses the firm hope that such action will be taken in consequence of this initiative as may ensure with the utmost speed the withdrawal from the struggle of all non-Spansh combatants participating therein," but "expressly urges the members of the League represented on that committee to spare no effort in this direction."

That clearly means—and the speech of the representative from Sweden, Mr. Sandler, confirms that interpretation—that if the London committee does not succeed in obtaining the withdrawal of Italian and German troops, the Spanish government is entitled to call upon the Council for action. The more so, because the preamble of the resolution states: "Confirming the principles and recommendations set forth in its resolution of December 12, 1936, and, in particular the duty of every state to respect the political and territorial independence of other states, a duty which, for members of the League of Nations, has been recognized in the covenant."

This cautious wording has its importance in view of two facts. First, Del Vayo, in his speech, has directly accused Italy and Germany of waging a war against Spain. Secondly, Article 10 of the Covenant, to which this phrase refers, obligates the member states not only to respect, but also to protect any state against the menaces to its territorial and political independence.

Debate Stirred Opinion Of World.

FINALLY, the importance of the League debate may be seen in the fact that, apart from Del Vayo's speech, the documents published in the White Book on Italian intervention have undoubtedly stirred up public opinion in Europe. The publicity of League debates is, in fact, one of the most powerful assets of the League machinery.

It must not be forgotten that Spain today, as was Ethiopia yesterday, is only one item in the complicated game of European power policy. And one thing has appeared very clearly during this session. The principal objective of British policy today is the breaking of the Berlin-Rome axis. London hopes to do so by arriving at an understanding with Germany.

In a speech made at a luncheon offered by the journalists to Nahas Pacha, Turkish foreign minister, Mr. Eden insisted on the hopeful prospects offered by the talks in London with people not normally present at Geneva obviously meaning Field Marshal Blomberg. The British spokesmen, in private talks, insisted on the fact that the Germans would like to be able to withdraw their troops from Spain. Rumors were spread that Del Vayo, in his speech, in order to please Great Britain, would attack only the Italian intervention and say nothing of the German. These rumors proved false for Del Vayo spoke as much of Germany as of Italy. Although the Spanish White Book emphasized Italian intervention.

Finally, on the last day in Geneva, the British, French and Belgians had a conference about the renewal of negotiations for a Rhine pact, the talks to be conducted by Great Britain with Germany, and leaving Italy out for the moment.

It is, therefore, clear that Great Britain was unwilling to do anything that might displease Berlin.

Nevertheless, paragraph 71, of the resolution runs:

"Profoundly moved by the horrors resulting from the use of certain methods of warfare, this body condemns the employment in the Spanish struggle of methods contrary to international law and the bombing of open towns."

The bombing of Guernica is thus solemnly condemned by the unanimous League Council. There can be no doubt that the inclusion of this paragraph is a victory of public opinion.

Mary Pickford's Wedding to Rogers Is Set for June 26

Hollywood, June 13 (AP).—Mary Pickford and Charles (Buddy) Rogers will be married Saturday, June 26, in a simple outdoor ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis D. Lighton in Los Angeles.

Miss Pickford today set the date and said she and the orchestra leader-movie actor would take a wedding trip to Honolulu.

The romance of Miss Pickford, 43, and Rogers, 32, began shortly after her divorce in 1935 from Douglas Fairbanks. The marriage will be her third, and the first for Rogers. Miss Pickford's first husband was Owen Moore.

Miss Pickford said the wedding date had been held in abeyance because of Rogers' movie and radio work schedule.

300th Birthday Marked By Governors Island

New York, June 13 (AP).—Three hundred years ago a plump Dutch Governor of New York boated out to a harbor island and gave some Indians two axe heads and a few nails. Today marked the start of a three-day celebration of the event.

For the axe heads and the nails, the Governor got the island, so they call it Governors Island. It is now an Army base described by officials as "a military nerve center second only to the War Department in its importance."

Artist's Gift to Russia.

New York, June 13 (AP).—Paul R. Meltsner, lithograph and mural painter, announced today the gift of four paintings and two lithographs depicting America's industrial scene to the Russian government for a Moscow museum. Meltsner said the pictures were "a gesture" following the receipt of a highly appreciative letter from the Russian Embassy at Washington.

Tax Research Unit Attacks Roosevelt

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt was accused by the Tax Research Institute of America, Inc., last night of demanding a Congressional expose of wealthy tax dodgers in order to cover "loss of face" suffered through reversals to his Supreme Court and Government reorganization programs.

Also, the institute said, Mr. Roosevelt is seeking through the forthcoming inquiry to camouflage the Treasury's error in computing estimated revenue in the 1937 fiscal year and failure of the undistributed profits tax to drive income into taxable hands.

The institute forecast these results of the inquiry:

1. An intensive drive against taxpayers in the higher brackets.
2. Curtailment of foreign personal holding corporations.
3. Sharply increased taxes on nonresident aliens.
4. Retention of the undistributed corporate profits tax.
5. Consideration of a most drastic corporations to withhold a portion of dividends for transmission directly to the Treasury. This would eliminate the Treasury's worry about obtaining the tax on dividends from the individual.

2 Young Writers Win Mifflin Fellowships

Boston, June 13 (AP).—The fifth and sixth of the Houghton Mifflin literary fellowship have been awarded to two young writers. The award is of $1,000 for the completion of a specific project, and publication of the project is contemplated as a matter of course.

The winners this year are David Cornel de Jong, a native of Holland, and Montana-born Dorothy Baker, of El Cerrito, Calif. Mrs. Baker is doing a serious novel about the rise and fall of a jazz musician—about "the difficulty of retaining integrity in a world of swift acclaim and swift disgrace," as she puts it.

London Letter

The New Cabinet.

London.

THE CHANGE of government took place smoothly and according to plan. The list of new ministers, down to the last undersecretary, was published within a few hours of Mr. Baldwin's resignation.

The list has occasioned little excitement, for the very good reason that it contained no novelties and very few surprises. In more than one respect, it can be called Mr. Baldwin's last cabinet. An incoming prime minister, succeding his retiring chief, would in any case, hesitate to make wholesale changes at once. On this occasion, it is widely believed that Mr. Baldwin made several strong requests, amounting almost to conditions. One was alleged to be that Mr. Anthony Eden should be in the cabinet; another was that Mr. Winston Churchill should remain outside.

• • • •

SOME MONTHS AGO there was good reason to believe that the Prime Minister and Mr. Eden did not see eye to eye. But recently, Mr. Eden has been winning praise all round. His handling of the long-drawn dangers of the Spanish civil war, in particular, has been considered very skillful, and on one or two occasions when he has been overruled by the cabinet, events have proved him right. The present belief is that he enjoys the new Prime Minister's confidence almost as much as the old, and that he is a fixture at the Foreign Office at least for the present. He has the great virtue, important in that particular office, of being as popular with the opposition as with his own party.

The case of Mr. Churchill is interesting. Ever since the defeat of Mr. Baldwin's second government (in which he was Chancellor of the Exchequer) in 1929, there has been a personal antagonism between the two men, which flared up in Mr. Churchill's leadership of the "Die-Hards" in the long battle over the government of India bill, and again in the abdication crisis. But there is no such antagonism between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Chamberlain. It may be significant that at the party meeting, Mr. Chamberlain's nomination to the leadership was seconded by Mr. Churchill.

• • • •

IT IS BEING widely said that the Prime Minister had Mr. Churchill in mind in arranging the appointments to the defense departments. It had been supposed that, in the middle of a vast rearmament program, as few changes would be made in these departments as possible. But to the general surprise, every one of the three ministers in charge of the admiralty was moved, Sir Samuel Hoare, the first lord of the admiralty, going to the home office, which is a superior post only in formal rank. The new first lord is Mr. Duff Cooper, who has hitherto been at the war office, where he has been anything but a success. It has not escaped notice that Mr. Duff Cooper is one of "Baldwin's men" (he was Mr. Baldwin's champion in the stirring fight against the press lords in 1930).

It is also an open secret that, of all offices save the highest, Mr. Churchill would prefer the admiralty, the scene of his triumphs two decades ago. The conclusion of this particular speculation is obvious, and it would surprise no one if, later in the year, Mr. Duff Cooper were to disappear and Mr. Churchill were to return to office.

In the blaze of splendor that has accompanied Mr. Baldwin's retirement, comparatively little notice has been taken of the other resignations. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, who has been continually in office for eight years, has also retired. He was offered an earldom, but refused, mainly, it is believed, because of the reluctance of his eldest son to assume the eventual burden of a title. But Mr. MacDonald has also refused the honor of the Order of Merit, the rarest, and consequently most respected, of British honors. (It was Mr. Lloyd George's reward for winning the war.) Mr. MacDonald has not resigned his parliamentary seat, and there is something of noble simplicity in the sight of a man who has held the highest office in the state retiring to the position of an untitled back-bencher.

• • • •

THE REMAINING vacancy in the cabinet was created by the retirement of Mr. Walter Runciman, who until last week was president of the board of trade (the archaic title for minister of commerce). Mr. Runciman has long given the impression of being a spent force, and his handling of the negotiations for an Anglo-American trade agreement have come in for particular criticism. He was offered a mediocre post in the new cabinet, but preferred to resign altogether.

His successor in what is, at least for the moment, one of the key posts, is Mr. Oliver Stanley, younger son of the Earl of Derby. Not very much is known of Mr. Stanley except that he is an earnest young man who made a bad record as minister of labor and a good one as minister of education. But quite a lot is known of his father's views. Lord Derby is often referred to as the "uncrowned king of Lancashire" and his close association with England's greatest exporting industry made him, for many years, the leader of the conservative free traders. There is consequently some reason to believe that the moderate policy pursued at the board of trade by Mr. Runciman will be continued, and even to hope that it may be given a more positive slant.

• • • •

THE MOST INTERESTING of the new appointments is, of course, that of Sir John Simon as Chancellor of the Exchequer. This for two reasons. The chancellor is traditionally the second post in the cabinet, and its holder has the reversion to the premiership. Sir John Simon, however, is a Liberal National, not a Conservative, and he will meet with much opposition if he presses his campaign.

The second reason is that the new Chancellor inherited, in the finance bill, the most unpopular measure which any chancellor has had to defend for very many years. This was the so-called national defense contribution which was the main surprise of Mr. Neville Chamberlain's budget. Shorn of its innumerable complications, the N. D. C. was intended to be a special levy on the growth of profits. It has been attacked by business because it is on profits, and by everybody because of the particularly inept and inequitable way in which it has been drawn up. In the debate it was found to have just one nonofficial champion—the solitary Communist member of Parliament. Finally, Mr. Chamberlain had to promise to withdraw the tax and find another simpler way of extracting the required revenue from the profits of industry. Thus the businessmen have only won half a victory, since the principle of a tax on profits remains.

For Mr. Neville Chamberlain this is a humiliating episode, and a most inauspicious beginning to his premiership. He must bear the responsibility, not merely because of his position in the government, but also because the tax appears to have been his own personal notion. The irony is that his intention was, by taxing profits, to demonstrate his inheritance of the liberal Baldwin tradition. As it is, he appears merely as a bungler in the sphere which was thought to be his specialty—the technique of public finance.

Among other effects, it will diminish his dominance over his colleagues. More than ever, with the retirement of Messrs. Baldwin and MacDonald, British politics assumes the appearance of a free-for-all. Power is waiting for any dominating personality who can emerge to lay claim to it.

About The Outdoors.

Here is a new book that will interest everybody; and I mean just that, it will interest everybody.

The title is "One Thousand and One Outdoor Questions" and the author is Iroquois Dahl and the publisher is the Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.

It is a volume of about 400 pages, mercifully light in weight, a great and blessed exception to most new books; it is printed in large type, with occasional interruptions in the way of illustrations.

• • • •

The object of the book is to supply immediate and concise information concerning animals and other outdoor phenomena. Majority of Federal Jurists Oppose Roving Court Proposal signed to them temporarily to sustain their objections.

Another significant aspect of the replies received by Senator Steiwer was that several judges contended that failure to fill promptly vacancies in their districts was responsible for docket congestion and delays in the administration of justice.

Text of Message.

Senator Steiwer sent the following telegram to the senior judge of each Federal district court in the country.

"Will greatly appreciate your advising me by mail your judgment whether services of additional judges are essential to expeditious administration of justice in your district. I would also like your opinion whether a plan for assigning additional judges to your district would be as efficacious as the appointment of additional judge or judges for permanent service in the district. In answering these questions I will be indebted for your advice on condition your docket. If there is congestion please inform me extent and also extent to which congestion has been reduced or increased during recent times and possibility of reduction in future."

The districts listed by Senator Steiwer as reporting a need for additional help were Massachusetts, Middle District of Pennsylvania, Western District of Virginia, Northern District of Georgia, Southern District of Florida, Eastern District of Louisiana, Northern District of Alabama, Northern District of Mississippi, Southern District of Texas, Northern District of Illinois, Western District of Arkansas, Southern District of California, Oregon, Western District of Washington and Eastern District of Oklahoma.

Sees Congestion Removed.

Surprisingly, Judge John C. Knox, senior judge of the District Court for Southern New York, where serious docket congestion has existed, reported that "unless the jurisdiction of the court be increased beyond any possibility of which I am presently aware, within a short period the present force of judges, with such assistance that is available within the judicial circuit, will be able to keep abreast of the work of the court."

Judge Knox revealed his court had made unusual progress since last June in reducing the volume of cases ready for trial. For instance, he pointed out that on June 30 last the common law jury calendar was 19 months behind, but that in March this calendar was current. This is one district where President Roosevelt failed to make additional judges authorized by Congress for a substantial period. But even with a full force of authorized judges, the court between July 1 and March 18 last had the help for 250 days of judges from other districts.

Judge Knox did not regard such service as efficacious as the services of permanently appointed judges to his court.

"While I thoroughly recognize the assistance that has come to us from judges without the district," he wrote Senator Steiwer, "I think it is safe to say that a judge who sits regularly in the district court can perform more work in a given time than will be accomplished by a visiting judge.

"In other words, a local judge can handle a specific calendar and keep it in constant movement whereas a visiting judge in many instances will confine his labors to a specific case. Visiting judges very seldom are asigned to our general motion term or to admiralty or to equity work. This is for the reason that most of them are not desirous of taking litigation which will require papers and briefs and depositions to be submitted for consideration."

No reply was received by Senator Steiwer from Judge Arthur J. Tuttle, senior judge of the eastern district of Michigan. This district court also has suffered from serious congestion, according to Justice Department records and presumably more help is needed in that court.

Judge Elisha H. Brewster, of the Massachusetts District Court, said he had "a deep-seated conviction that Congress should provide every district with a sufficient number of judges to take care of the work of that district without outside assistance."

Judge John Paul, of the western Virginia district, reported a crushing burden of work due to the growth of population and industrialism in his district, as well as the flood of recent Congressional legislation and land condemnations for Federal purposes.

Held Unsatisfactory.

"It is my opinion," he said, "that the suggestion of assigning an additional judge to the district for temporary service would in no way be satisfactory under the conditions that obtain here. I am not faced by a mere temporary congestion which could be relieved by the temporary assistance of some other judge, but I am faced with a constantly growing burden of work over a district of large area in which industrial development has taken place and in which more litigation is constantly being had in the Federal court."

Judge Wyane G. Borah, of the Eastern District of Louisiana, at New Orleans, gave it as his opinion that "the assignment of judges from other districts is not practicable and relief should be afforded by the appointment of an additional judge for permanent service in this district."

He pointed out that such had been the recommendation of the judicial conference of senior circuit judges for the last two years.

Judge David J. Davis, of the Northern Alabama District, was one of the few leaning toward assignment of additional judges as a solution to the problem. He said he was required to work long hours to keep up with his docket and that he had not sufficient time for research work. Although he said he believed "each district should be supplied with enough judges to keep up with the docket, under normal conditions, by working reasonable hours," he also thought that "the judges should be assignable to other districts to help when the dockets are crowded."

Added Judge Not Needed.

Judge Allen Cox, of the Northern Mississippi District, did not think his district required an additional judge, but held that there should be an additional judge for the State of Mississippi. He pointed out that serious congestion existed in the Southern Mississippi District. There the President permitted a vacancy to exist for more than nine months.

Judge Thomas M. Kennerly, of the Southern Texas District, urged appointment of additional judge for his district and asserted that "I doubt if the situation can be adequately met by assigning to the district judges from other districts."

Judge T. Blake Kennedy, of Wyoming, reported he needed no help but was able to help out in other districts. He contended that "in these districts where the congestion is more or less continuous and perpetual, it is my opinion that the problem should be solved by the appointment of additional judges in such districts."

Judge Harlan W. Rippey, who is now on the New York Court of Appeals, having been elected to that post last November and having resigned as Federal judge for the western New York district, reported congestion was growing in the latter tribunal because of the President's failure to name a successor for him. Since he wrote his letter an appointment to that vacancy has been made but has not yet been confirmed by the Senate.

Judge Heartsill Ragon, a former Democratic member of Congress and now judge for the western Arkansas district, urged a third judge for the State or appointment of law clerks to assist the present two district judges. He approved the President's proposal for appointment of a proctor but to give Congress a concrete picture of the judicial system.

New Judge Urged.

Judge William P. James of the southern California district at Los Angeles, reported his court was 12 months behind with its work and said he saw no prospect of any decrease in the court's business. He urged at least one additional judge for his district and added that "it is my view that better service is secured where judges are permanently assigned to the district."

From the Oregon district court Judge James Alger Fee reported that "since Judge McNary's death I have held the jury calendar even by trial of cases at nights and even on one occasion on Sunday." He said that "the assignment of additional judges to the court for temporary periods is a doubtful expedient in my opinion."

"The attorneys of the district," he continued, "become used to the personality and the methods of the resident trial judges. Questions of court discipline and procedure which are not covered by formal rules are usually controlled by informal agreement of the resident judges. No outside judge is apt to conform to these methods. My experience has been that the attorneys are often dissatisfied with the methods of judges assigned from other districts, albeit that these may be in accordance with the law."

"Besides, there is another factor which should be taken into consideration. Under the present practice in accordance with the conformity act, the outside judge usually cannot be assigned for trial of law cases because he has no acquaintance with the statutes and the rules of evidence governing the law courts of the particular State and since he must rule without investigation, he is quite apt to fall into error. The trial judge so assigned may be given other types of cases but he cannot be assigned to the trial of law cases."

The Judge McNary to whom Judge Fee referred died last November and a successor for him has not yet been named by President Roosevelt.

These excerpts from the replies received by Senator Steiwer are typical of the attitude of the district judges now serving regarding the proposal to create a flying squadron of Federal judges to be assigned around the country to clear up docket congestion.

Former Stunts Of Press Agent Are Scrapped

By John Peere Miles.

Hollywood, June 13 (U.P.).—When motion pictures acquired the dignity of backing by the Nation's highest and most cautious banks, something happened to change the technique of ballyhoo.

As a matter of fact, a good many things changed with them. Directors like Von Sternberg, Von Stroheim, DeMille and Niblo dropped the silly megaphones which were their badges of authority, supervisors changed their titles to associate producers, the Will Hays office came into being and with it an era of thumb-twiddling and early-to-bed schedules.

The press agent was affected more than most. In the more glamorous days he was a graduate from the Barnum school of hokum. The newspapers were airtight then, insofar as film news was concerned, and he had to dynamite his way through.

Achieved Color.

In doing this he achieved a color which not even the glamorous creatures who were his subjects could match. Given a few minutes' time, he would forge college diplomas to give some dumb-belle under his wing added dignity of education. He changed names of players, and in this respect the best example is that of Ricardo Cortez.

The man who was to be Ricardo Cortez came to Hollywood as Jacob Krantz. The production and publicity heads were aghast that such a name should ever have been considered for picture work. Jesse Lasky, to whom this problem was brought by his publicity head, scratched his head for a suitable name.

Suddenly he spied two cigar boxes in front of his desk. One bore the brand Ricardo, and the other, Cortez. "We'll call him Ricardo Cortez," said Lasky—and that was that.

One-Man Parade.

One inspired gentleman, now a producer of short subjects, kidded the mayor's office of the city of New York into giving him a permit for a parade in honor of Douglas Fairbanks. When the day came a cordon of police lined the streets and the mayor's committee was on hand to welcome the actor.

But at the appointed time only Fairbanks appeared. In solemn dignity he walked up Broadway—a one-man parade, which cost the city thousands of dollars.

One stunt that garnered considerable space concerned a pretty youngster who wasn't getting anywhere. In desperation she hired a publicist and this gentleman conceived the idea of burning her with acid. One evening a girl was heard screaming in a hotel room, police were called, and this was her story:

"They said I was too beautiful to be a good actress (this was when all beautiful actresses were considered dumb Doras) and so I poured acid over my face and legs."

"Drowning" No Longer Clicks.

What happened was that the press agent had poured a mild acid over her body, resulting in a rash that appeared serious for a time. The girl obtained work for a few months but in the end even her beauty was no excuse for her sour gifts as an actress.

One of the most effective space-grabbing stunts of the past was to report an actor drowned. Usually the press agent waited for a stormy day at sea and then, breathless by the exercise of his own imagination, he'd telephone the newspapers that his client was at sea in a small boat and unheard of for hours. It worked very well, this stunt, until four of the boys missed out on their agreement to alternate the drownings and when four of them tipped off the newspapers within a period of hours this particular stunt was at an end.

Rialto

The Rialto Theater this week reopens with another double bill and a new air-conditioning system.

The foremost feature of the program is "Hell's Angels," that fabulous Howard Hughes production that was made twice before it was released and in its final form catapulted the late Jean Harlow into permanent screen fame. It is an aviation story in which the leading male roles are played by Ben Lyon and James Hall. It was about completed as a silent picture, with Greta Nissen in the feminine lead, when sound came in, then was junked and remade as a sound picture with Miss Harlow in the Nissen part. The rest is history. "Hell's Angels" probably is the most pretentious picture ever made glorifying the air service in wartimes.

The auxiliary attraction is "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford," a mystery-comedy in which the major roles are played by William Powell and Jean Arthur. Mr. Powell here attempts to solve several murder mysteries, thoroughly impeded by the ex-Mrs. Bradford, who decides to come back and marry her former husband. Together they get affairs pretty well tangled, with many a good laugh along the way.

Short-reel subjects complete the bill, with a comprehensive newsreel added.

Belasco.

"Children of Loneliness" opened its engagement at the Belasco Theater at a late preview Saturday night and last night inaugurated the summer policy of the house of operating evenings only.

This subject presents a frank discussion of the problem of homosexual relations among the young. It does so with some discretion and tips and scales a little on the side of scientific justification by presenting as a corollary attraction Dr. M. Bertrum Crabill, Washington physician, who delivers a short talk from the stage on the topic with which the picture deals.

The story is one of involved and impossible love affairs among office workers and others, all of whom, of which ever gender, find it difficult to be attracted by members of the opposite sex. It is not an especially enticing subject for those in quest of innocuous entertainment.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

The American Stage Will Lose Katharine Cornell For Two Years If Her World Tour Materializes

Following 1938 Spring Tour, 'First Lady of Theater' Will Embark on Pretentious Adventure; Capital Booked for Fall Premieres; Irish Flock to 'Parnell;' Washingtonians Win Prizes; Current Notes.

If her world tour materializes, as it probably will, Katharine Cornell will not be seen on the American stage for 18 months or perhaps two years after she completes her projected spring tour in 1938.

For this reason, she has selected a number of cities for her itinerary in which she has not appeared since her 17,000-miles tour in 1933-34, including Columbus, Ohio; Indianapolis, Ind.; St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.; St. Paul, Madison and Milwaukee, Wis., and Montreal in Canada.

BELL.

She also hopes to appear in Des Moines, Omaha, Buffalo, Toronto and Cincinnati, the latter city being the home of Gustav Eckstein, author of "The Ivory Fan," which will be her first production next year, according to present plans. The premiere of this play, which is described as a Japanese "Camille," will be in the National Theater in this city on March 7, if present schedules hold.

The scene of the play is Japan and the scructure of the drama derives from the Dumas perennial, although the characters and the motivation of the story are original.

It is probable that "The Ivory Fan" will reintroduce Miss Cornell to London, where she made her first stage success as Jo in "Little Women."

With Ray Henderson, distinguished stentor for the Cornell-McClintic organization launched on his trip around the world, announcement is made that Mr. McClintic has engaged Richard Maney as press representative for the productions he plans for next season. Mr. Maney is one of the ace typists in his field. This past season, Dick represented Maurice Evans in "Richard II," Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence in "Tonight at 8:30," "Excursion" and Billy Rose's enterprises. He is possessed of one of the keenest senses of humor in show business and is a nice fellow to have around.

It is announced from New York that a probable early autumn offering at the National Theater will be "Madame Bovary," the Baty dramatization of Flaubert's novel, with Constance Cummings in the title role. The play has been adapted and will be directed by Benn S. Levy, who happens to be Miss Cummings husband.

The play will be on the list of six to be presented under the auspices of the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington on a subscription basis. It is not yet a surety whether "Madame Bovary" will arrive in Washington immediately preceding or immediately following Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in their new play of "Amphitryon." At least it will be prior to the New York presentation and, from present prospects will be a premiere.

Miss Cummings, incidentally, who seems now to have definitely allied herself with the living theater, for many seasons was one of the leading feminine stars of the cinema, having appeared conspicuously with George Raft in "Night After Night," the first picture in which the undulant talents of Mae West ever manifested themselves upon the screen.

The Irish converged in great numbers upon Loew's Capitol Theater over the week-end, lured by the magic name of "Parnell." Foremost among the Capitol's guests was Michael MacWhite, Minister of the Irish Free State, and his official family. Others included Ross Downing, local attorney, and members of his family; Barry Bulkley, Mrs. Annie McKeever Callahan and many more. Mr. Downing and Mr. Bulkley both met Parnell when he visited here in 1880 and Mrs. Callahan sat enthralled in the gallery of the House of Representatives when the Irish statesman made his famous speech before the Congress of the United States.

Two Washingtonians this week will receive checks won in a national contest conducted by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the Loew Theaters.

From New York comes word that Mrs. Sada Witt, 1775 California street northwest, has won a $10 award and Mrs. Frances E. Smith, 6211 Piney Branch road northwest, a $5 prize. These awards are made in the recent slogan contest conducted by the companies named in their "Screen Snapshots" campaign.

Little

"Dancing Lady," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production that created considerable furore at the time of its original release, was revived yesterday for a week's run at the Little Theater.

The ostensible stars of the picture are Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, in the title role, and Franchot Tone, but there are two others among the comparatively minor players whose names command equal attention at the present time. They are Fred Astaire and Nelson Eddy. This was their induction from other field into the mysteries of picture-making, and how they have since made good is a matter of common knowledge.

The supporting ensemble includes, in addition, such luminaries as May Robson, Robert Benchley and Ted Healy.

Here, then, is a screen play that seems, even this long after its production, to have everything. The story is sprightly, the settings lavish and the photography up to present-day standards. It is, as everybody knows, a tuneful backstage comedy-romance that gives every member of the cast an opportunity to show his wares.

The bill is completed by a varied list of short-reel subjects and news events.

Wallet Sought as Clew In Anti-Fascist Murder

Bagnoles, France, June 13 (AP).—Investigators tonight sought a missing wallet as a clew to the slaying Wednesday night of Carlo and Nello Rosselli, anti?Fascist Italians living in France.

The investigators said they believed Carlo, who owned the wallet, carried papers "of enormous importance to high official Italy," but did not state the nature of the supposed documents. Police said a dagger found beside the bodies was manufactured in Florence, leading to a belief the killer or killers may have followed Nello Roselli from that city when he came here to meet his brother.

Rossville, Ga., June 13 (AP).—Philip Baumgartner, former CCC clerk, who was dismissed for his hunger strike against "corps conditions," said he was "considerably weaker" today, the twenty-eighth day he says he has gone without food.

"I have no desire for food, but I can tell my strength is going pretty fast," he said.

Baumgartner declined to reveal any future plans he may have other than to say "I'm going to keep fighting until this thing is satisfactorily settled."

I've told stories about Sid Grauman, original owner of the Chinese Theater, but here's one that tops them all. Sid has been living in one hotel for 18 years and has often bragged about how quiet the place is. The other day, an amateur saxophonist occupied the next room and began pacticing "Margie" at 4 o'clock in the morning. Sid couldn't stand it; he moved to a hotel in Beverly Hills that very night.

• • • •

Once in his new room, however, he realized that he had made a mistake. Two California mocking birds were staging a whistling duel outside his window. Sid fired a waste basket at them, and they flew away, only to return immediately with three pals for a grand concert. Grauman gave up, dressed, returned to his own hotel. But before he re-occupied his old room, he placed an order for the largest saxophone made. Next midnight he started playing his own version of "Stars and Stripes," tooting so loudly he almost swelled the room's four walls. An hour of this, and a slip of paper suddenly appeared beneath the door. It was from "Margie;" it read: "I'll quit if you will."

Sitting in a studio restaurant a couple of noons back, I overheard two actresses panning a mutual acquaintance. Anyone who thinks Robert Taylor is just a pretty-boy should ask Brian Donlevy about it. Donlevy is tough people (with Max Baer shoulders), yet he raves about Bob's he-man qualities. It seems that Brian, for a picture scene, had to grab Victor McLaglen and twist him around. The effort, despite the shoulders, sprained Donlevy's wrist. "The very next scene," Brian told me, "Bob had to let Vic clip him on the jaw. Taylor took it without flinching, though the crack sent him sprawling. If it had been me, I'd have ducked—camera or no camera."

And speaking of camera-or-not-camera, Slim Summerville told the director on "The Road Back" that he would not work until they moved the "graveyard." I can understand Slim's complaint. For the battle scenes, the studio rigged out several hundred dummies in uniforms. Between shots, these "soldiers" were piled on the roadside like cords of wood. Slim complained that sight of them made him gag. For sake of peace—so war could go on—the graveyard was abolished.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Steering Away From Danger.

Beware of philanthropically telling an opponent that it is hopeless to continue with a plan that cannot succeed. He may believe you and try another that will. In the hand below South was a philanthropists—as West was to discover in the play.

South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened his fourth-best spade, East playing the Jack. South saw that the contract would probably hinge on the club finesse. Regardless of its success, he needed only one spade trick; if it were unsuccessful, the opponents were bound to shift to hearts unless they could be steered away.

South, therefore, won the first trick with the Ace of spades! This play was both brilliant and logical. The best way to steer the opponents away from a dangerous suit is to make another suit appear more attractive to them.

Dummy's Ace of diamonds won the second trick, and the Queen of clubs was finessed around to West's King. West decided that his spade suit was established and led a low spade to his partner's supposed Queen. To his dismay, South won the trick with the Queen of spades and rattled off his game.

Obviously, if South had won the first trick with his Queen of spades, West would have realized the immediate need of a shift. Hearts being the only logical suit, he would have tried it out and would thus have defeated the declarer.

Popular Front Victory In Spain Predicted

Only direct intervention of Italy and Germany through open shipment of troops in large quantities, as threatened by the recent bombardment of Almeria, can prevent a speedy victory of the Popular Front forces, James W. Ford, Spanish correspondent for the Afro-American, told an audience yesterday afternoon at the Frederick Douglas Memorial Home in Anacostia.

Representative Henry G. Teigan (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, also spoke at the meeting, which was held under joint auspices of the American Friends of Spanish Democracy and the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Battalion.

FINANCE DEPT.: George Abbott will produce and direct the movie version of "Room Service" for Warner Bros. . . . The Warners had backed "Three Men on a Horse," "Boy Meets Girl" and "Brother Rat," but lost $83,000 backing "Sweet River" . . . Abbott, to compensate them for that loss, offered them the opportunity of backing "Room Service," but the Warners had had enough—and turned down the play for which they've just paid the record price of $250,000.

SCHOOL DEPT.: Jerry Kennedy arrived from Harvard Law School this week and is living at Alexander Woollcott's home . . . At 4 a. m. yesterday he was in one of the night clubs, somewhat puzzled. "I know that Alec mentioned something about street lamps," he confessed, "but for the life of me I can't remember whether he said he wanted me home before they go on or after they're out!"

• • • •

BUSINESS DEPT.: Jackie Osterman, who already is making a comeback although he's only 34 years old, introduced a new routine at the Mirador last night. He mounted a platform and did a tap routine on a xylophone—a routine Will Mahoney has been featuring for many years . . . The comic finished his dance, beamed in self-approvement, and bragged: "Who is this guy Milton Berle?"

• • • •

MUSIC DEPT.: Peggy Garcia, whose name made the front pages throughout the country when she brought suit against Dave Rubinoff, finally has landed a job . . . She opens this week at Butler's Ye Old Tap Room—on Columbus avenue.

• • • •

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.: Everett Sloane of "Boy Meets Girl" was busy preparing a scrapbook for his new-born baby . . . "You've only got the clippings from last week," Mrs. Sloane complained. "Where's the clipping from that column which announced that the Everett Sloanes are anticipating a bundle from heaven?" . . . "Oh, that one," Everett explained, "that's in my scrapbook!"

• • • •

TRAVEL NOTICE.: Ethel duPont and her fiance, F. D. R., jr., are in town now buying a trousseau . . . Miss duPont and her mother are registered, under fictitious names, at the Madison.

RADIO DEPT.: Max Eastman, who wrote "Enjoyment of Laughter," has been signed by C. B. S. for a series of novel broadcasts in the fall . . . Eastman will analyze the humor and delivery of each of the foremost comedians in America and explain why we laugh. Arthur Boran, the mimic, will impersonate the various comedians for the broadcasts.

DANCE DEPT.: She walked to the Stork Club floor and waltzed gracefully—as gracefully as she did in those days when she was a Follies girl. She steered her partner toward the bandstand and asked Sonny Kendis to play "Did I Remember" . . . The others stopped to watch the lone couple swaying to the slow tempo. Seven times the song was repeated, and then she returnd to th bandstand. "Thanks," she whispered to Kendis. "That song is my favorite—it makes me think of a boy I once knew." . . . Her fiance was killed last year in an accident at St. Moritz. Her name is Peggy Joyce.

HELP WANTED: A script writer approached Paul Stewart, the radio actor, and said "Vernon Radcliffe, the N. B. C. director, left to go on WPA" . . . "Well," Stewart sighed, "it must be a helluva small station. I never heard of it!"

PoliceGuard Loyal Garbage Workers

Providence, R. I., June 13 (AP).—Police armed with riot guns tonight maintained their lines in the sand flats surrounding this city's incinerator, where 35 nonstriking employes have "dug in," with cots and food supplies, to assure operation of the incinerator and sewage disposal plant in the face of a general strike of public works employes.

As the third day of the strike of 1,000 men approached, Commissioner of Public Works Charles A. Maguire, his assistants, and police made final plans to break the strike. The first real test will come at 7 a. m. when 40 hired trucks, each with a police escort, will rumble out of the incinerator yard to collect the city's week-end garbage.

Melodrama Today First On Barn Theater List

Washington's original summer barn theater, the Roadside, opens tonight with an old melodrama, "The Wizard of the Wave." This thriller inaugurates the fourth season of the Roadsiders. Later in the season, "Our American Cousin," "The Prisoner of Zenda," and "A Texas Steer," three of the most popular plays of past generations, will be revived, and two more meldramas will be done, "The Haunted Mill," and "Murder In the Red Barn."

In the cast of "The Wizard of the Wave" are such well-known local actors as Denis E. Connell, Ralph Fowler, Virginia True, Betty Rice, Rachel Sewell and Clarence Ruebsam. Production of this play, as well as of the entire season, is handled by a managing board composed of Anton Hardt, play director; Richard Creyke, business manager; Catherine Prichard, publicity director; Ralph Fowler and Edwin H. Etz.

House-to-House ParsonsKidnap Hunt Ordered

Federal, State and Local Men Will Search 10-Mile Radius.

Parsons' complete statement follows:

"This is the fifth day since the disappearance of my wife Alice. I am worried and distraught. The strain has been very great, not knowing whether she is safe and well cared for.

"We, of course, are at the mercy of the person or persons responsible for her disappearance.

"I again wish to assure this person or persons that I stand ready to comply with instructions they may give. Whatever is humanly possible will be done by me to see anything they may request is done in secrecy.

"I request this person or persons to immediately communicate with me in order to expedite the return of Mrs. Parsons. To the press and all law enforcement officers, I have a special request to make.

"Judging from the whole-hearted and sincere efforts of these gentlemen to comply with my prior message * * * I know you will again grant me the favor * * *

"Due to the possible unthinking action of certain individuals who have again congested the area about my home, * * * I again request that all such activity about my home of this nature cease * * *

"In conclusion, I wish to advise of my sincerity in requesting this and my appreciation of the consideration shown by all persons addressed."

He did not identify the "certain individuals."

The previous message to the kidnapers to which he alluded was made in a similar statement Thursday. As far as is publicly known, no answer to it was ever received.

Mrs. Parsons was last seen driving away from her home with an unidentified middle-aged couple, supposedly to inspect a piece of real estate in which she was interested.

Police questioned a Russian-born housekeeper-companion, Mrs. Anna Kupryanova, who lived at the Parsons home with her 11-year-old son, and also questioned her former husband, found in Long Island City 50 miles away, but the interviews apparently were unproductive, and both returned to their homes.

Rural Electric Lines Sought For Maryland

Approval of REA Work Stimulates Interest in Other Projects.

College Park, Md., June 13.—The approval by the State public service commission of a rural electrification project in southern Maryland was said today to have stimulated interest in lights and power for farm homes in other sections of the State.

A. V. Krewatch, specialist in agricultural engineering for the University of Maryland Extension Service, announced that meetings are scheduled for Westminster, Carroll County, on June 14 and Bishops Head, Dorchester County, on June 15, to consider similar projects.

Other localities also are manifesting interest in electric service, Krewatch said.

Charles O. Falkenwald, project adviser and field representative of the Rural Electrification Administration, is assisting with the meeting and in the development of projects in Maryland.

The project approved for southern Maryland provides for approximately 170 miles of line. A survey is in progress with the possibility of developing 80 miles of rural line serving approximately 300 families.

Krewatch explained that the Rural Electrification Administration is a Federal organization completely independent of the various departments of government. It does not, he said, maintain State offices, but works through field representatives in the various States in co-operation with the extension service and county agents, the farm bureau and other organizations interested in rural electrification.

It operates, he added, by lending money for self-liquidating projects. Co-operative associations must be formed to receive the loans and carry their responsibility for operation of the electrification work.

Steel Output Recedes to 74% During Week

But May's 5,153,559 Tons Was Exceeded Only Twice in Steel History.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

Cleveland, June 13.—A minimum of inconvenience is being met by steel consumers by interruption of steel deliveries from blockaded mills. In a few instances tonnage has been booked by other producers to supply urgent needs of users, but this has been of small proportions, says Steel.

While buying is less than in earlier weeks, new business on mill books is sufficient to retard reduction of backlogs. Deliveries are improving, but slowly, and some producers continue unable to offer anything under several weeks.

Pressure for export tonnage is strong, and, in addition to the 40,000 tons of ingots for Japan, placed a week ago in the Pittsburgh district, a like tonnage has been booked in another district for the same destination. It is understood both these sales were at about $40 per ton, f. a. s., which is an attractive price. Inquiries for pig iron continue to offer premiums over domestic prices, one now current involving 40,000 to 70,000 tons for shipment to France.

Tin plate makers are being rushed for delivery of as much as they can produce at fullest operation. Demand for cans to care for bounteous crops resulting from excellent growing weather is causing heavy specifications. Tin-plate producers abroad appear to be oversold and much export tonnage is offered American makers.

A drop of 1 point in the national operating rate brings it to 74 per cent capacity. Youngstown district gained 1 point to 30 per cent, and Buffalo 1 point to 89 per cent. Chicago, at 63 per cent; Cleveland, at 46; Birmingham, at 83, and New England, at 45 per cent, showed no change from the previous week. Pittsburgh lost 3 points, to 92 per cent; eastern Pennsylvania, 6½ points, to 64½; Wheeling, 1 point, to 96; Detroit, 5 points, to 95; Cincinnati, 3 points, to 93, and St. Louis, 6 points, to 85 per cent.

For the third consecutive month steel ingot output in May exceeded 5,000,000 tons, the first time in steel history so sustained a rate has been made. May production was 5,153,-559 tons, exceeded only twice previously, in March this year, and in May, 1929. Five months production totals 24,580,871 tons, compared with 24,133,319 tons in the same months of 1929, the record year. This indicates possibility of a new record for production in 1937.

Washington Credit Conditions Improve

Retail credit conditions for Washington showed improvement in 1936 compared with 1935, according to an announcement yesterday by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce. A survey of credit conditions in 88 cities throughout the country, covering 14 kinds of retail trade, in which the Associated Retail Credit Men of Washington actively co-operated, reveals that the local stores reporting had higher collection ratios, lower bad-debt loss ratios, and increased credit sales in 1936 than in 1935.

Customers of the 24 stores reporting (2 automobile; 1 coal, fuel oil, and wood; 7 department; 1 furniture; 2 grocery; 1 heating and plumbing; 3 lumber and building material; 1 men's clothing; 2 shoe; and 4 women's specialty stores) paid for their regular charge purchases in 2 days less time during 1936 than during 1935. The collection percentages averaged 41 for each month of 1936 and 40 for 1935, indicating that accounts were outstanding 73 days in 1936 as compared with 75 days in 1935.

The ratio of bad-debt loss to open-credit sales of local reporting stores was lower in 1936 than in 1935, .6 of 1 per cent and .7 of 1 per cent, respectively. For all stores in the 88 cities combined the ratio was .5 of 1 per cent in 1936 and .6 of 1 per cent in 1935.

Wood Production Drops 11% in Week

The lumber industry during the week ended June 5 stood at 77 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 70 per cent of 1929 shipments.

Partly due to the Decoration Day holiday, lumber output declined from the preceding three weeks and shipments and new orders were the lowest of any week of the second quarter to date. Production was slightly above, and shipments and new business were below, corresponding week of 1936.

National production reported for the week ended June 5 by 2 per cent fewer mills was 11 per cent below the output of the preceding week; shipments were 15 per cent below shipments of that week; new orders were 7 per cent below that week's orders, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important hardwood and softwood mills.

Trading Shrinks as Labor Supplants Gold as Upsetting Market Factor.

New York, June 13.—last week was one of reassurance to the financial community on one of its worries, namely, possible change in the gold price, but also one of increasing anxiety over labor problems. Actual business of the week seems to have changed little, but the general drift is downward with the season. Markets have reflected the indecision elsewhere. Prices on balance in stocks, bonds and commodities have gone down moderately, and the volume of dealings has been at the lowest ebb in two years. Neither to buy nor to sell but simply to watch and to worry seems to have been the watchword of speculator and investor alike.

"Idleness, to say nothing of rioting at a number of steel and motor plants in Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and in scattered communities, and later an organized attempt by labor organizers to take armed possession of the Michigan capital, is doing something to accentuate the dullness which otherwise would be regarded as a seasonal development. The steel industry, for example, is down to 76 or 77 per cent of capacity, the drop from above 90 per cent operations having coincided with the outbreak of strikes, which also have begun to cut into railroad traffic in the affected regions.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Stop Beau From Kissing, Caressing and Praising All Girls Indiscriminately Is Her Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in love with a boy whose ways I don't quite understand. He has told me he loves me and his actions seem to prove it. He is sweet, generous and considerate and would do anything in the world for me. But he has one social gesture which, although you may think it harmless enough, is very annoying to me.

* * * *

Whenever a girl joins a group or comes up to us, he invariably says, "You're looking lovely tonight," no matter how she looks. Also, he has a habit of putting his arm around other girls, or kissing other girls, right before my eyes, while saying something endearing. I know he means nothing by it, but I am of a rather jealous nature and it irritates me. Persons who don't know him very well get the wrong idea. I have never said anything to him about it, but I would like to know how to put a stop to it. Have you any suggestions?

* * * *

What is the proper thing to say when a boy pays you a compliment? This boy will interrupt a sentence to tell me how lovely I look or what beautiful eyes I have. He pays me compliments in a different tone of voice than he uses to other girls, however. I don't want to seem coy or silly. To pretend I don't believe him doesn't seem quite right. So can you tell me how to react when he pays me compliments? Sincerely,

B. E. G.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR B. E. G.: Your boy friend's conduct is enough to exasperate and humiliate any girl who happened to care for him; not that it should make her jealous, necessarily, but that it should make her feel ashamed of him, and inclined to regard his devotion as a doubtful compliment. In plain words, he is something of a fool. His parrotlike repetition of false praises is an insult to any perceptive listener's intelligence (including the intelligence of the person he attempts to praise). And his promiscuous kissing and caressing is an uncouth offense against good taste. By such conduct, he reveals his own lack of good breeding, and implies an assumption of the same lack of breeding in the girls he fondles. Moreover, he proves himself extraordinarily insensitive to your reactions, through not having realized intuitively long ago how such actions hurt you and through not having reformed accordingly.

* * * *

Until and unless he does reform, I see no reason why you should accept his compliments gracefully. Since they are cut from the same piece of cloth as those he proffers to all and sundry females, I think it might be just as well to laugh them to scorn. My only suggestion for putting a stop to his clownish conduct is to tell him frankly that you find it obnoxious—not because you are jealous, as I said before, but because it makes you ashamed for him, because his actions embarrass you.

* * * *

If he were the sort of person whose compliments meant anything, and he interrupted a sentence to laud your loveliness or the beauty of your eyes, it would be enough to say, "Thank you kindly, sir," in mock appreciation. But since his compliments can be had for a dime a dozen, figuratively speaking, or even for less, I think the better plan is simply to ignore them. If he asks, "Well, what have you got to say?" or some such query, you might reply, "Yes, I find my eyes quite satisfactory," or "Yes, I think I'll do," and then continue with: "However, your saying so doesn't prove anything. I've often heard you make exactly the same remark to girls who looked like freaks, and you knew it." In fact, such an interchange might provide the opening you need for telling him just how absurd his lady-killing antics are.

M. H.

An In-Law Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married five years and have a son 4 years old. Ever since I have been married, I have lived with my husband's family. Each year my husband promises me a place of our own and the end of each year finds us still here. We pay a substantial board and yet, after working in the office all day, my husband spends his evenings and holidays working their ground, never finding time to take us for so much as a ride.

* * * *

His family treats me like a servant, insulting me whenever they see fit. I am not the fighting kind and say nothing. I do everything in the world to keep peace, and yet my husband always says I am in the wrong. They are always finding fault with my son, and say he is spoiled. He is spoiled, but it dates back to his infancy, when I was not permitted to let him cry because it might disturb their sleep.

* * * *

What would you advise me to do? I would go to my folks, but they live in a small apartment and my father is sickly. I am still in my 20s and feel that I am too young to waste my life this way. I am so unhappy. I feel sure my husband and I could get along if we had a little place of our own. He won't leave his family and I just can't live with them any longer. I don't want to divorce him, because I want my child to have a father's companionship—although I must say he hasn't been much of a father to him. I can't have my child reared in this environment. They all drink, smoke and curse and never go into a church. My child is old enough to notice these things now, and I want him to grow up a good boy.

DISHEARTENED.

Take Firm Stand.

DEAR DISHEARTENED: There is only one thing you can do, and that is to fight for your rights as you see them. If your husband is making enough money to support his family, however modestly, in a home of his own, inaugurate a spirited, never-say-die campaign toward that end. If he insists that he cannot support you elsewhere than under his family's roof, then you must fight for better treatment under that roof. Distasteful, though it may be to one of your peaceful nature, you will simply have to tilt with their own weapons, giving them as good as they send until they realize they are dealing with a desperately determined woman, and not with a broken-spirited doormat.

* * * *

When they say the baby is spoiled, admit it, but ask them whose fault it is. Tell them it is their fault and your husband's fault, for conspiring to rear him under a two-family roof. Don't permit them to treat you like a servant. Do your fair share of the work, assume your fair share of responsibility, and stop short right there. If your husband sides against you, make no effort to enlist him on your side. Treat him as he invites being treated—as one with these tacit enemies of your happiness and your child's future well-being. Such an attitude on your part will bring this domestic fester to a head in much faster time than will your patient endurance of the unendurable. It won't be long until his family is demanding a change of some sort. And he will have to take some action.

For the Fair Gardener—Full Skirts or Trim Overalls

The effective frock below, in peasant style, is fashioned of hand-blocked Javanese batik; designed by Mme. Marge, of Hollywood. An ideal frock for the smart summer gardener, and equally appropriate for resort wear. Note the smart flat-heeled, barefoot sandals.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Man-Haters.

"Well, I can't say that I envy any of them—what they're getting.

"Me either. It's funny how some girls will marry just to get married. I'm not that way. Now take this friend of mine out in Nevada. He's been nagging me for seven years to marry him—he could give me everything—but I wouldn't marry him if he was the last man in the world."

"The trouble with all the men I meet is they're so commercial. I like a man to be intellectual—so we can have something in common."

"I don't know what's the matter with me? I just can't get interested in men any more. Oh I like to play around with them occasionally, but just as soon as they begin to get serious, I lose interest."

"I guess the trouble with me I'm too self-sufficient. I like to get out and do things and go places by myself."

"I do too—if men would just leave me alone. I had the funniest experience yesterday in a delicatessen. All the time I was eating a man kept watching me—he was sort of strange and foreign looking—and what do you think? He waited to pay his bill just as I did mine and followed me two whole blocks!

"You know an awfully good looking man in a big motor car has been simply pestering me to death trying to pick me up every morning on the way to work."

"Say, don't talk about being pestered! A grass widower in our apartment house is driving me wild. He comes over every night and stays and stays until I nearly lose my mind. It's not that I've got anything against the man—I really feel sorry for him—but I just don't know what I'm going to do to get rid of him."

"Earl Bender's been calling me up a lot since he got his divorce. I'm scared to death he's going to ask for a date and I don't know what on earth I could say. I'd hate to hurt his feelings."

"You know the reason I don't like most men is they make so many passes. It seems like whenever I go out with a man it's a continual struggle."

"It's exactly the same way with me. I can always have a better time in a crowd of girls. I always feel so much more—well you know, freer."

"Say what are you doing tomorrow night? Why don't you come over? I'm having some of the girls in to play bridge.

"I'd love to, but—well you know this Chauncey, this grass widower, is coming over and I'd hate to disappoint him. He's so terribly lonesome."

"Has he got any money?"

"Well he's got a marvelous position with the chives people. Lots of girls, I suppose, would consider him a good catch, but you know I guess I'm funny. I just can't seem to get seriously interested in any man. They all leave me cold."

"Me either. I can't get excited about them. You know last summer there was a man on the boat when I came down from Boston—everybody said he was a millionaire—and he gave me a terrible rush. But I just couldn't put myself out for him at all."

"Just can't be bothered any more. There was a man the same as proposed to me on the train to California last summer. Well, he simply offered me everything, travel in Europe and a little roadster of my own, but some way he just wasn't my type."

"That was the way with this man on the boat. He had a fine personality and came from a marvelous family, but I couldn't see him at all.

"Well, if I don't like anybody, I just don't like 'em. I always say I'd die an old maid before I'd compromise with my standards."

"That's the way with me. Say, where are you going on vacation?"

"Well, I think maybe I'll take another long train trip. Trains are so wonderful now. What are you going to do?"

Other Uses for Shells.

Have you ever considered how many uses there are for cream puff shells besides using them for cream puffs? They can be stuffed with fish salad or chicken salad for party refreshments, or they can be filled with ice cream and served with hot chocolate sauce for dessert. They also make excellent containers for whipped cream and fruit fillings.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Artificial Vitamins.

MORE AND MORE is being learned about the vitamins. It is lucky that they were widely distributed in our common foods, because they are absolutely necessary to life and health.

With the growth of chemical knowledge concerning them, it has been possible to isolate them in pure form. And it is natural that artificial or synthetic products of this kind should be offered to the public and recommended for use in tablet form.

When I say artificial form, I mean in a form separate from their natural state in food. I do not mean to imply anything derogatory when I say synthetic. These products are undoubtedly the real thing. They have as much action as the natural vitamin. The only question is whether it is necessary to administer extra supplies of them when we get all we need in a well-balanced diet.

Two of them, it is generally agreed, must be added to the infant's diet. So long, at least, as the infant lives exclusively on milk. Milk is likely to lack sufficient quantities of Vitamins C and D. But with the growing tendency to add vegetables and fruits to the infant diet very early in life, this will take care of Vitamin C. And as time goes on, sunshine will take care of Vitamin D. The consequence of possible Vitamin D deficiency are, however, so serious that it is well to supply cod liver oil up to the third year.

For adults living on a balanced diet, it is best to forget the vitamins.

One class of cases, however, need especial consideration. And they fall within our definition because for one reason or another they are not living on a balanced diet. For instance, the alcoholic addict sometimes develops a degeneration of the nerves with paralysis, called alcoholic neuritis. This was generally supposed to be due to the alcohol itself. Then someone suggested that this neuritis is very much like the beri-beri which occurs in the East Indies, due to a diet insufficient in Vitamin B, and that since it is well known that alcoholics eat a very one-sided diet, or often no diet at all, getting their energy from the alcohol, the idea was formed that the neuritis was actually due to lack of Vitamin B, and that the alcohol had nothing to do with it.

To put it to the test, a number of patients with alcoholic neuritis were put on Vitamin B with great improvement, even though they continued imbibing. Control groups were studied, with the conclusion that the alcoholic who had adequate Vitamin B did not develop neuritis; in the group where the vitamin-caloric ratio was too low, neuritis was common.

The same thing was found when the condition of the digestive tract was found to be so upset they could not absorb certain foods—in tuberculosis, diabetes, cancer and certain cases of subnutrition in infants. Here Vitamin B was given hypodermically in pure form.

Vitamin B is found in nature in milk, eggs, whole wheat bread and whole rice.

Editor's note—Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending ten cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of The Washington Post. The pamphlets are "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "Care of the Hair and Skin."

Cover Old Blankets.

With spring cleaning time near, you will undoubtedly find some of your blankets too thin in places to mend. Do not cut them up or discard them. Instead, cover them with attractive percale and tie off as you would a quilt. They make ideal coverings for summer and are so easy to launder.

Back-to-Nature Movement Brings Togs for Garden Wear

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

THERE IS a back-to-nature movement on foot in the summer fashion picture! Unlike other trends and influences, it is to be taken literally, and is not just a synthetic whim in the style scene. In other words, gardens have taken precedence over bridge games and active sports this season, and the country is full of fair gardeners. All of this means an entirely new addition to the wardrobe—special clothes designed for the "woman with the hoe," rake, and picturesque garden baskets.

For active work in the garden, one of the smartest things you can wear, according to fashion's new dictum, is a pair of brilliant or dark-colored slacks, topped by a coolie coat of contrasting color. Such a costume is not only attractive, but appropriate, and there are endless possibilities for varying the original outfit.

Gay Bandanna Used.

A gay bandanna tied around your head adds color and gives a picturesque air to the costume; dark-colored glasses protect the eyes from the glaring sun. If more protection for the eyes is desired, it is a grand excuse to don one of the huge-brimmed garden hats of straw whose crown is fashioned of mesh, cord or brilliantly colored cotton.

Another practical and popular costume for the smart gardener is the fitted overall, worn with a shirt of bright gingham, chintz, or cotton broadcloth. Do not confuse these with the old-fashioned versions which had no shape at all, because the summer, 1937, interpretations are streamlined.

Head Covering Should Match.

Denim, in navy or faded blue, is the usual material for these clever overalls, which cross in the back with two straps, finished with a row of buttons. Your head covering should harmonize in both material and theme—meaning it should be very casual.

An entirely different type of costume is worn for less strenuous gardening, for instance, gathering the blooms for house and terrace bouquets. If you want to compete with the gladioli, peonies, roses and the like, and not appear too drab by contrast, then choose a colorful peasant-type dress. The same frock is equally suitable for serving tea or tall cooling beverages in the garden, to the casual guests. Cotton frocks in gay colors and patterns, in simple styling, topped with a large straw hat or a brilliant 'kerchief twined around your head, is the answer to this gardening problem. It is a fiesta for the feet too—with the new and clever toeless, backless, and almost heel-less shoes, in bright or neutral color tones. Their choice depends entirely upon the styling and color theme of the garden frock.

Prevents Tarnishing.

Keeping lame blouses and silver or gold slippers free from tarnish is assured by the new envelopes of black cellophane cellulose film, made for this purpose. The dark color prevents the daylight from entering and dimming the brightness of the metal fabrics. The large size for blouses and the two bags for shoes are firmly bound at the sides and provided with cloth gussets to give plenty of room. The contents are protected from dust as well as from tarnish and the glossy black film is decorative on the closet shelf or in the dresser drawer.

Air-Cooled Millinery.

New York (AP).—Open-work hats this year will display intricate patterns. Not content with mere slits in the crown fabric, designers are busy cutting diamonds, circles, and squares to allow smart coiffures to peek through. Linen and pique are still popular hat materials.

Ready for Showers.

New York (AP).—Mademoiselle's evening gown may now be treated with a water-repellant finish. Consequently, she is prepared for dancing at the seashore, or for an unexpected shower inland.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 13.

THE FIRST THOUGHT that came to most of us, I suppose, when we heard of the death of Jean Harlow at 26, was a sense of the terrible injustice of malicious Fate in checking out one so young and lovely and alive. The girl's vitality, as well as her opulent, though obvious, prettiness, was one of her greatest screen qualities—it sort of pepped us just to see her, and to realize that such a luscious and bumptious girl was ours for a quarter.

ALICE HUGHES.

It would be idle to say that Jean was much of an actress, save in a broad type of comedy in which she really shone. But it would be equally idle to say that our eyes are not the poorer for her summary removal from our ken.

I'll not forget my first interview with her. It was in 1930, when she was making personal appearances here with her first film, "Hell's Angels." At that time an inspired press agent coined the term "platinum blonde," and so was responsible for overbleaching countless thousands of feminine thatches all over the Republic.

I buzzed the door of her suite at the New Yorker Hotel and was admitted by the handsome Mrs. Bello, her mater. There on a couch, draped prettily, was the shapely Jean, in her hand a six-pound novel by Sigrid Undset, no doubt purely a prop. She picked at a lamb chop for luncheon, saying she just had to diet, and then proudly cracked a couple of bottles of fattening beer she had brought from Canada! After trying the movie-star act for half an hour, she wearied of it and became jolly and genuine, and we had a free, frank and amusing time while I got my story. Now that bundle of youth is gone! It isn't possible—but there it is.

I am astounded to learn that 70,000,000 pounds of perishable food arrive in this growing community each and every day, which can keep together the souls and bodies of a right smart number of folks. As I scan my grocer's bill at the end of the week, I seem to be laying it on the line for most of this grub.

Meeting movie-star Glenda Farrell on Fifty-seventh street the other afternoon, I found this gentle, pretty blondie in a quiet rage at the movie system which has typed her in hard-boiled parts. She loathes the gun-moll sort of thing, and she tells me she sizzled to a crisp when British newspapers headed stories of her arrival in England, "Tough Baby Arrives!" Poor ole Glenda!

I used to work on the Press Argus back home, and one Sunday Hugh Park, the editor, went to church and he got in in the middle of the sermon. He listened to the preacher talk for a while and then he grabbed his hat and dashed out down to the editorial chambers of the Press Argus.

He called us all in, and when we were assembled he says "What's the matter with you fellows? What have you been doin'? How about the news from the seat of the Big War?" And we said "What news?" And he says "Why, all this about the Egyptian army bein' drowned in the Red Sea!" He says "The minister up at the church knows all about it—you boys haven't had a word of it in the Press Argus. Ceremonies, which included a patriotic address by Representative Matthew J. Merritt, of New York, began a series of exercises. These will reach their climax this afternoon and tonight, celebrating the act of the Continental Congress of June 14, 1777, officially adopting stars and stripes as our national emblem.

Rites at Capitol Today.

The principal program today is to take place on the east front steps of the Capitol. Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, is to address the assembly brought together under the auspices of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, and the Women's Relief Corps. The United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, of which Representative Bloom is chairman, will assist in the arrangements.

All afternoon the United States flag that is believed to be the largest in the world, will be displayed in Griffith Stadium. From 1 p. m. to 6:30 p. m. the flag, 102 feet by 185 feet in size, will be stretched over the bleacher section of the stadium. The John L. Burnett Council, No. 4, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, will display the flag. Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, will give an address in the stadium at 5 p. m.

The stars and stripes were described by Representative Merritt during yesterday's services as the symbol of unity in a Nation.

"A Flag Day in the United States of America in the year 1937 is an inspiration to all of us," Merritt declared. "Old or young, he continued, "rich or poor, powerful or weak, we assemble as Americans. We forget strains of origin, we forget differences of religious or political belief. We see a single flag, one emblem that proclaims our national union, our history of effort and of service, our hope of continued freedom and progress."

Flag Pageant Given.

Representative Merritt's remarks were preceded by a dramatic presentation of the history of our flag by Past Exalted Ruler John D. Fitzgerald, who had the assistance of several color bearers, who brought forward, one by one, the several flags that our country has used. This part of the program was climaxed with a tableaux depicting how the American flag evolved.

The Elks' Boys Band played a half-hour concert before the ceremonies, and played special numbers during the program. D. J. Laporte, acting chaplain of the lodge, gave the invocation, and John E. Lynch was chairman.

Tonight's program at the Capitol will begin at 7:30 o'clock with a half-hour concert by the United States Navy Band with Alexander Morris, second leader, conducting. Then as the band plays "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," the colors of the organizations of veterans of three wars and their auxiliaries will be advanced.

R. J. F. McElroy, patriotic instructor of the local department of the G. A. R., will call the assembly to order, and introduce Commander John M. Kline, who will present Mrs. Mary E. Brown, department president of the Woman's Relief Corps. The Rev. John C. Palmer, will give the invocation, and Rabbi Abram Simon will pronounce the benediction.

Representative Bloom's address will be broadcast by Station WOL at approximately 8:40 p. m.

Sponsored by the District American Legion, Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, will speak for 15 minutes at 10 p. m. today in commemoration of flag day. His address will be broadcast by Station WJSV.

Congressional Leaders Expect Bitter Battle As D.C. Omnibus Tax Bill Goes to House Today

Reported Complications in Revenue Measure to Stir Debates.

Congressional leaders, particularly those who look after the District affairs, last night anticipated a bitter battle in the House this afternoon when the omnibus tax bill, designed to raise millions of dollars in revenue here next year, is called out on the floor.

Loud will be the voices of the legislators who plan to defend and denounce the varied and complicated ways which Chairman Ambrose J. Kennedy and his associates on the District sub-committee have devised to collect taxes from the District's residents.

Silent, on the other hand, will be the will of the people who are to pay those taxes.

Yesterday many of these taxpayers and spokesmen for taxpayers gave The Post their views—views which they have no way of presenting before the voting legislators today.

One resident declared: "This most important bill presents the country with an outstanding example of taxation without representation."

Another said it contained schemes,

Harris & Ewing.

notably the "business privilege" plan that "can't operate," and were not equitable.

Others pointed out that the bill, with all its faults, at least would save home owners from having to pay higher taxes on real estate.

"Unless we get this bill through," declared Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, the District's auditor, "we face obligations with no money to pay them. We are confronted with a potential deficit of $7,500,000 in the general fund. Our appropriation from the Government has been reduced, therefore we must raise more money for operating expenses.

Donovan said that if the omnibus bill fails it would be mandatory on the Commissioners to increase the rate on real estate and tangible property to meet these operating costs. The District must run its government on a "pay-as-you-go" basis. That's the law.

Members of the Board of Trade, admitting the situation as Donovan described it, expressed, at the same time, little sympathy for Representative Kennedy's bill.

"It's a bad jumble of a great variety of taxes," declared Edward F. Colladay, the boards' president, "it needs very careful revision and climination of many items.

THOMAS E. LODGE.

"The board's views can't be heard on the floor of the House, but a group from our organization expects to appear before the Senate committee, and offer its views and assistance in revising the bill in the hope of obtaining a proper tax measure for the District of Columbia."

Colladay observed that the Board of Trade, representing Washington's businessmen, had made itself heard previously. Before committee hearings it had opposed the income tax, favored the sales tax. It had opposed numerous taxing devices which were given a place in the final draft of the bill.

Said Robert F. Cottrell, of the Board of Trade staff: "If the Government paid its fair share of the cost of operating the District, there would be no need for the taxes in the omnibus bill. But if the Government won't do as it should, we should have a sales tax."

Cottrell offered the opinion that the "business privilege" tax can't operate "because it would put many out of business;" that the income tax as proposed isn't good "with all the exemptions up and down the scale."

Called Regrettable.

To Thomas E. Lodge, president of the strong Federation of Citizens' Association, the present situation is "regrettable" because of the lack of information available about the bill.

"Nobody knows," he said yesterday, "just what is in the bill. And there is no opportunity to find out. I regret there is no opportunity to be heard in the matter of this most important of all bills affecting the District of Columbia, and the fact there's no way to do anything about it.

"It's an outstanding example of taxation without representation."

Furthermore, Lodge pointed out "here is a situation where the budget is substantially increased over past years. But Federal appropriations have not increased. The Federal Government ought to increase its appropriation proportionately."

The Federation, according to Lodge and L. A. Carruthers, chairman of its committee on fiscal relations, hasn't had the opportunity to pass on the omnibus bill. But the organization put itself on record as opposed to an income tax, and in favor of a "tangible personal property tax" for utilities and, in addition, a "privilege" tax on gross receipts.

Oppose Tax Increase.

"I haven't read the omnibus bill," said Carruthers, "but we are opposed to any increase in real property tax, and, if additional revenue must be raised, it must be by other taxes."

This is the view of most home owners. Summed up by Charles J. Rush, executive secretary of the Real Estate Men's Association, the opinion of the property owner is this:

"We think that real estate has been taxed enough. It already provides 83 per cent of the revenue.

"We haven't any means of expressing our views before Congress, and Congressmen have ideas of their own. But Congress should appropriate sufficient Government funds to carry on the Nation's Capital. Everything that's done here is to make this city the Capital of the Nation. Streets here are wider than in any other city this size, and that's just one thing. We've alwyas felt that the Federal Government should appropriate money enough to run the city.

According to Donovan, should the omnibus bill fail to pass, the Commissioners would be obliged ao raise the real estate tax rate 60 cents—to $2.10.

Recommended by Committee.

Meanwhile, the Kennedy bill stands on the recommendation of its committee, which reported Saturday:

"It is the opinion of the committee that this legislation will adequately supply the necessary funds to meet the deficit, and yet create the least amount of hardship on the residents of the District of Columbia."

Representative Kennedy was out of the city yesterday, but it was understood that plans to push the tax bill ahead of other district legislation on today's "District Day" calendar remained unchanged. In the absence of Representative Mary Norton, chairman of the District Committee, Kennedy will introduce the bill himself.

The entire day is expected to be devoted to the tax bill, and other measures probably will be left over for the final "District Day" of the month, June 28.

Members of the House have taken unusual interest in the District's tax bill. This was indicated Saturday by the requests in the document room for copies of the measure. It was reported that staff people there were swamped with these requests.

Catholic U. Graduates Hear Cassidy

Graduates of 1937 are entering a society by "the fierce strife of capital and labor, the collisions of commercial and political interests, and the conflict of fanaticism with constituted authority," the Rev. Dr. Francis P. Cassidy, dean of men at the Catholic University of America, declared yesterday at the baccalaureate mass which opened the forty-eighth commencement of the school.

In this society, Dr. Cassidy said, the obligation of Catholic graduates surpasses that of others because "they stand before their fellowmen as an example of training that is not exclusively intellectual in character."

"It is the duty of our Catholic college men to assume positions of leadership in local communities and rescue humanity from its present dismal situation."

Honor graduates were announced at the annual senior banquet of the undergraduate colleges held at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel.

Raymond L. Baker, 3418 Reservoir road, will be graduated from the School of Engineering and Architecture with the highest rating of the department, receiving the electrical engineer degree summa cum laude. His average for four years has been 3.61 out of a possible 4 points.

D. C. Police, Family of Keene Dispute Md. Suicide Verdict

Give 10 Reasons, They Say, Pointing to Murder of Elderly Real Estate Dealer on Potomac Steamer Month Ago.

Washington police and a spokesman for the family of Charles F. Keene were in sharp disagreement with Maryland State police yesterday on the "suicide" verdict given out Saturday in the Capital's river mystery.

Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty said he could not dismiss the case as suicide, though Maryland police listed 10 reasons why they thought the elderly real estate man killed himself a month ago aboard the steamer District of Columbia, en route to Norfolk, on the Potomac River.

"Finding bloodstains in Keene's berth, on the washstand, on the window sill, on the handrail, and on the after deck rail, casts grave doubt on the suicide theory," Flaherty said. "The Maryland police hinted the blood was blown into the room by the wind, as Keene stood outside his window on a catwalk and killed himself. That seems impossible to me." Flaherty worked on the case for several days.

Suicide Is Doubted.

A spokesman for the family of the dead man, whose body was found Memorial Day in Chesapeake Bay, challenged every point Detectives Marlin Brubaker and J. J. Cassidy listed in their report Saturday to F. Kirk Madrix, State's Attorney for Somerset County. Going through the Maryland officers' reasons, one by one, this spokesman reasoned as follows:

1. Keene was not in serious financial straits, as the detectives reported. He was not affluent, but he had been in much worse financial condition and the prospects for the future were the brightest in years.

2. Keene was not unhappy. His nature was generally cheerful.

3. He had not threatened to commit suicide. So far as the spokesman knew, he never had mentioned the subject.

4. He was not depressed the day he boarded the boat. He chatted and joked with several people before sailing.

Some Angles Unsolved.

5. The brief case found tied to his neck was not positively identified as Keene's. Even if it was his, and even if the tea strainer and silver mesh bag in it were identified as an inheritance from his sister, the heavy automobile jack and tire iron found in it have not been explained. These peculiar weights, and how they got into his stateroom, are of more vital importance than his own possessions. Where did they come from?

6. Keene did purchase a one-way ticket to Norfolk, but he told his wife before he sailed he planned to come back by bus or rail to save time. Brubaker thought the one-way ticket significant. Mrs. Keene is quoted as having told Brubaker of her husband's plan to return by bus or rail.

7. True, no one has come forward to tell of a business appointment which Keene was supposed to have planned in Norfolk. But Keene, a guileless man in the business world, had lost out on several previous real estate deals by telling acquaintances about them. He may have kept this one secret for that reason, and perhaps the owners of the Norfolk property did not know he was coming; further, it may have been unnecessary for him to see them.

8. Keene did not tell his wife that the old hat on his head was being worn for the last time. She remarked before he left that he ought to get it blocked and cleaned, and said she would get out a summer hat for him.

9. James H. Starkey, an old acquaintance of Keene whom he met on the boat, may have thought Keene depressed. But that would be only a personal opinion. Keene may have been tired or not feeling well, or something may have occurred between them which Keene resented. He may have been merely preoccupied with his business of the next morning.

Not in Need of Money.

10. Keene was not desperately in need of money. Keene's son is married to a wealthy New York woman. His family knew as much about him as anyone.

After attempting to dispose of the Maryland police arguments as set forth above, the spokesmen then struck the same note of unbelief regarding the blood stains.

"Such a theory is incredible. The wind couldn't blow his blood in three different directions—that is, onto the washstand, into the bed across the room, and over the outside of the ship in the opposite direction."

Keene owned only one gun in his entire lifetime, the spokesman said. That was a .32-caliber pistol willed him by his sister, which he sold to an Alexandria (Va.) pawnbroker. Where the death weapon came from is a mystery which must yet be explained. The empty cartridges found in his pocket could have been placed there by a murderer to simulate suicide.

State's Attorney Madrix read the detectives' report yesterday, and commented:

"The preponderance of evidence at this time indicates that Keene apparently took his own life. The case is still open."

A coroner's jury has pronounced the death a murder. Norfolk police have listed it as "murder during robbery."

Keene's family has not abandoned hope that the mystery will be more satisfactorily solved, and trusts that the hearing to be held before the Bureau of Steamship Navigation and Inspection will develop additional clews. Madrix said he would not close his books on the case for a year.

A. F. G. E. Rebels To Discuss Terms With C.I.O. Heads

The seven insurgent lodges expelled Saturday from the American Federation of Government Employes for fighting economy measures pending in Congress will discuss "terms" with the C. I. O. at a meeting to be held early this week, it was stated yesterday.

"It will be an exploratory conference and as a result we probably will come to a mutual understanding in regard to what each group could expect from an affiliation," Arthur Stein, chairman of the "outcast group," said Saturday night.

While both the C. I. O. and the insurgents are voting on the question of whether they want to cooperate, the expelled lodges will open a drive for membership and begin "legislative contacts."

Eight Runs in 8th Win Opener by 9-4

Zeke Bonura Gets Two Homers in First; Kreevich and Sewell Also Connect; Stratton Wins Seventh by Taking Nightcap.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 13.—That tough gang of South Side characters known as the White Sox, who have been terrorizing the American League for the past two weeks, brutally assaulted the visitors from Washington this afternoon—twice.

In broad daylight, with 33,000 Chicago citizens urging 'em on, the White Sox stole up from behind, clubbed the Nats cruelly, and relieved them of two ball games. The scores were 9 to 4 and 3 to 2, in the order in which the Nats fell.

Lulled into a false sense of security when the Nats gave him a 3-to-1 lead in the eighth inning of the first game, Pete Appleton went gayly back to his pitching. And then the Sox ganged up on him.

Eight hits spouted from the Chicago mob's bats in that eighth. Three of 'em were for the maximum—home runs by Luke Sewell, Mike Kreevich and Zeke Bonura. The Chiacagoans weren't wasting their ammunition. Each homer occurred with a man on base and the ball game crashed down about the ears of Appleton.

Threw Away Tying Run.

But the Nats asked for that second beating. With a stupid bit of heedless and headless base running, they ran themselves right out of the ball game in the ninth. And they also lost for lack of a bunt.

They needed a run to tie the game in the ninth, and when Johnny Stone, the first hitter to face Monty Stratton, sliced a two-bagger over third base, the Nats seemingly had a pretty good chance of getting it. But for some reason, Al Simmons designed not to sacrifice Stone to third and eventually struck out.

But Cecil Travis breathed new life into their hopes when he hit a crisp single to right field. On the first hop, Dixie Walker, rushing in, fielded the ball and fired it toward the plate. But Stone, with no chance to score, rounded third and continued home at Coach McNeely's urging. He was met there by a reception committee consisting of Catcher Mervyn Shea, knee pads, chest protector and the ball, and the White Sox had the ball game.

The story of that first game is the story of that eighth inning. And the chances are it will not make very delightful reading for you Washington folks. Because those deceitful guys, the White Sox, who are never to be trusted, sneaked up from the rear and black-jacked the Nats into defeat just when it seemed that the Washingtons were going to make good their escape with the ball game.

For seven innings it was a nice, orderly game with the score tied at 1-1. Pete Appleton was pitching five-hit ball and Ted Lyons was torturing the Nats with his hinky-dinky curves, despite the eight hits he was permitting.

Back in the fifth after Mel Almada had wangled a walk out of Lyons, Joe Kuhel and Johnny Stone whacked singles into centerfield to set the Nats up in a 1-0 lead. But it lasted no longer than it required Zeke Bonura to get to bat in the Chicago half of the inning. Because Bonura, who led off the inning, whaled one of Appleton's pitches into the leftfield seats for homer No. 10, and it was 1-1.

It was pretty gay for the Nats for a while; in that eighth they moved into a 3-1 lead very quickly. Al Simmons reached Lyons for a single to center and so did Cecil Travis, and when Buddy Myer walked the bases were filled, with none out. Johnny Stone shoved one across with a mammoth fly to Walker and Appleton put the Nats two runs ahead with a superb bunt that he beat out for a hit.

But that's all the Nats got out of the inning and then came the crash.

To state briefly what happened, Bonura singled to center. Then Appling scored from third when Lewis was occupied in throwing Hayes out. Then Cecil Travis attempted to field Piet's easy grounder with one eye on Appling, who was on third base, and booted the ball, Appling scoring with the tying run. Then—but we ought to start another paragraph.

Then, as I was saying, Luke Sewell hit the longest home run of his 15 years in the big leagues—a beauteous belt over the left-center scoreboard, and the Sox were in front, 5 to 3. Then Ted Lyons grounded out and then Rip Radcliffe hit a two-bagger to left. Then Kreevich hit a long fly that was caught—by some fan in the upper deck in centerfield—and it was a home run that upped the Sox's lead to 7 to 3.

Then Jimmie DeShong relieved the wilting Appleton. Then Dixie Walker singled over Myer's head. Then Zeke Bonura, who was apparently under his daily quota, having hit only one home run up to that point, hit another one—into the right-centerfield seats and showboated around the bases behind Walker to score the Sox's eighth run of the inning.

That's all that happened in that eighth.

The second game was a comparatively peaceful affair. The only items that disturbed the Sabbath during the first four innings were a pair of home runs that Cecil Travis and Joe Kuhel socked against the pitching of tall, spare-ribbed Monty Stratton.

Travis wheeled on an inside pitch in the second inning and thumped a long fly into the upper deck in rightfield to establish the Nats in a 1-0 lead and Kuhel duplicated that stunt in the fourth to make it 2-0.

That was the score when the White Sox began to annoy Carl Fischer in the fifth inning. The lower end of the batting order started trouble for him. Catcher Mervyn Shee bashed a single to left and Pitcher Stratton contributed a cheap one-bagger over Travis' head.

But Fischer was knee-deep in trouble a moment later. Buddy Lewis' throw to second on Radcliff's attempted sacrifice bunt was late and the Sox had the bases full with none out. Here, Fischer's control left him and he walked Kreevich to force Shea home.

Fischer apparently was over the hump, though, when he forced Walker to pop up and then fanned the menacing Zeke Bonura, but he couldn't get rid of Lucius Appling. That is, he couldn't get rid of Appling until after Appling smacked a single to center that sent Stratton and Radcliffe scurrying home with the runs that put the Sox in front, 3-2.

The one scoring chance the Nats had from the fourth to the ninth they muffed—in the seventh inning that was when Travis beat out a hit to Appling and, with two out, Wes Ferrell appeared as a pinch-hitter for Millies and singled to center. But another pich-hitter named Freddie Sington waved futilely at a third strike and the Sox still had their 3-2 lead.

They still had it at the end of the ninth, too, but that was strictly the Nats' fault.

Shortstop Travis, of Washington (No. 5), scores in the eighth inning of yesterday's game in Chicago after Pitcher Appleton has bunted with the bases full. Catcher Sewell recovered the ball in time to catch the runner at first. Ormsby umpiring. It was all so futile, however, as Chicago won, 9 to 4.

Clairvoyant Wins Rich French Race

Paris, June 13 (AP).—Clairvoyant, racing for the Argentine-owned stable of Eduardo Martinez de Hoz, won the rich Prix du Jockey Club at Chantilly today by a length and a half over Princesse de Faucigny-Lucinge's Actor, Simon Guthmann's Galloway, at 25-10 shot, was third, a length further behind.

The race, over the 2,400 meters distance, had a value of 300,000 francs (about $13,380). Clairvoyant was second favorite at 16-10, while Actor was held at 13-10.

E. de St. Alary's Tesse, paying 87 to 10, won the Prix du Gouvieux, worth 5,000 francs (about $1,115) over the 2,100 meters course. J. Cunnington's Liserb was second, three-quarters of a length behind, nosing out Guthmann's Bachagha for the place.

Yankees Beat Browns, Second Game Is Tie

Seven-Run Rally in Ninth Gives New York Win in First Game; Second Called in 11th With Teams Stymied at 8-8 Score.

St. Louis, June 13.—The pitchers took it on the chin today as the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Browns battled more than five hours to one decision and a tie.

A 7-run rally in the ninth inning of the first game gave the league leading Yanks a 16 to 9 victory. The second game was ended by agreement at the end of 11 innings with the score tied at eight, as both teams had to take a train for the East.

There were 33 hits and 7 pitchers in the first game. Four of the hits were homers, Tony Lazzeri's cleaning the bases in the Yanks' big ninth. Harold Clift, of the Browns, hit a pair.

Joe DiMaggio hit three circuit blows in the second in which both teams got 24 safeties. Clift hit another homer.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 13 (AP).—Dizzy Dean pitched a five-hit shutout victory today before the biggest crowd of the year in Boston—41,079 paid customers—as the Cardinals swept both ends of a double-header from the Bees.

The loquacious St. Louis right-hander set down the Bees, 1 to 0, in the nightcap after the Cardinals had captured the first game, 6 to 2, behind the pitching of Bob "Lefty" Weiland.

In chalking up his ninth triumph of the season, Dizzy struck out nine Boston batsmen and did not issue a base on balls.

A run in the second inning of the second game, when Boston missed an attempted double-play, brought victory to the Cardinals, who otherwise found the offerings of Lou Fette, the Bees' 30-year-old freshman hurler, baffling. He allowed only seven hits.

With one out in that inning, Frenchy Bordagaray singled to left-field and went to third on Leo Durocher's hit to center. Ogrodowski grounded to Fette, who threw to Warstler, but the latter failed to touch second in an attempt to force Durocher. While Ogrodowski was being thrown out at first, Bordagaray came scampering home with the deciding marker.

The Bees got two men on the bases in the seventh via singles with only one out, but Dean turned on the steam again and whiffed Fletcher and Lope to end the threat.

A four-man rally in the sixth inning, in which Ducky Medwick hit his eleventh home run of the season with two men aboard, gave the Cardinals a victor yin the first game. The Bees were leading, 2 to 1, at the time, with one of the runs coming on Gil English's four-base clout.

Ulbrickson Won't Bet Huskies Will 'Sweep the Hudson' Again

By Frank Gorrie.

Seattle (AP).—If the University of Washington crews "sweep the Hudson" again with a triple triumph in the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 22, Coach Al Ulbrickson will be vastly pleased—and surprised.

In order to duplicate their all-conquering feats of 1936, Ulbrickson says, the varsity will have to be "red hot" on race day, the junior varsity will have to keep its present fast pace and the freshman eight will have to be better than he thinks it is.

That is the semi-pessimistic outlook of the man who coached the varsity to the 1936 Olympics 8-oared championship in Germany after knocking off all three national titles on the Hudson.

Ulbrickson has the Olympic crew intact, except for the coxswain, but it gives him the jitters now.

"The Olympic champions are too spotty to bank on very strongly," he says. "They're on one day and off the next. They run fine at a slow beat of 26 but they seem to have lost their rowing stroke. If they happen to be right on race day the boys will have a chance. At their best they are about as fast as last year."

Ulbrickson considers the varsity race a toss-up, with Navy furnishing the stiffest competition.

"Coach Buck Walsh claims he has the fastest Navy crew in history, and if he is right we are in for a lot of trouble. California, Cornell and Syracuse can't be overlooked either. I look for a dog fight."

Ulbrickson admits his junior varsity should win. The Washington jayvee ranks close to the varsity and even has beaten the Olympic veterans in several practice spins. At the Pacific Coast regatta in April the junior boat cracked the varsity record for the Oakland estuary while Washington was scoring its clean sweep.

"With only four boats entered in the jayvee race, I believe Washington will have the edge," Ulbrickson says.

In the 2-mile freshman event he looks for a four-ply fight among Navy, Cornell, California and Washington, with the Middies probably sporting the fastest boatload.

"I don't see how we can possibly take this one, but of course you never can tell what a bunch of green freshmen will do.

"There is little chance that Washington will repeat its sweep of the Hudson, because all the crews will be gunning for us this year and the Eastern competition will be stronger. If our freshman boat happens to pull a surprise, then it might be possible, but I'm not predicting such a feat or expecting it."

Heurich Brewers Are Winners Of Crucial National Loop Tilt

By Jack Munhall.

Heurich Brewers slugged out a 9-2 victory over Gordon's Cafeteria and took undisputed possession of first place in the unlimited A division of the National City League.

A large crowd on the South Ellipse watched the Beermen pound the slants of Willie Silverman for nine runs in the first three innings and coast in behind nice five-hit pitching by James.

In the B division the lead shared by four nines was taken over by New Deal and Star Radio. New Deal shut out Read's Pharmacy, 6 to 0, as Devers pitched the best game of the day, allowing only two hits. Star Radio trimmed White Haven, 8 to 5. Peck was the winning moundsman. Gibson, playing third for the winners, starred at bat, getting three for five.

In the Midget section, the Police Boys Club, No. 5, broke a tie for the lead by beating the co-leaders Drandes, 11 to 1, behind effective twirling by Walsh.

Police Boys Club and J. C. Flood still share the lead in the junior branch, as each turned in one-sided triumphs. The former defeated Griers, 11 to 0, as Carver pitched another two-hit game. The latter blasted Browdy, 18 to 4, collecting 17 hits in the most powerful batting spree recorded.

2 Champions Head Week's Fistic Card

Lewis and Ross Fight on Lively National Fight Program.

New York, June 13.—Two champions, John Henry Lewis and Barney Ross, and a return engagement between Bobby Pacho and Baby Saban, headline this week's national boxing program.

Lewis, world's light-heavyweight titleholder, who successfully defended his title against Bob Olin last week, meets Al Attore, of Philadelphia, for the third time in a 15 rounder at Philadelphia Tuesday. Their first fight was a draw with the Negro copping the decision in their second encounter.

Favorites Sail Along in Grand National Amateur Tennis Tournament

Harry March Nearly Upset By Late Entry

By Jack Munhall.

Favorites sailed merrily into the third round of the Grand National Amateur tennis tournament yesterday on the Monument courts with but two exceptions.

Tom Moorehead, seeded 6, failed to appear for a scheduled setto with Hugh Sprigg, and the latter was offered the match on the default. But Sprigg displayed good sportsmanship in declining and they will meet today.

Harry March, the tall, well-built youngster, who is rated ninth, ran into a newcomer who was also used to clear sailing and Harry's craft was given some heavy pitches before he righted it to win in three sets, 5—7, 6—3, 6—2. The newcomer, Lieut. L. G. Halstead, late of the Naval Academy and No. 1 on the net team, was a substitute entry of whom little was known.

However, he quickly built up a reputation when he won the first set from the highly-regarded March and an upset-sensing crowd gathered. March wasted no time in grounding their expectations as he combined cannon-ball services with a steady back-hand to win with comparative ease although carried to set point five times in the final set.

Meanwhile, Dooly Mitchell, Yelverton Garnett, Hugh Lynch, Tony Latona, of the locals, and George Dunklin and Frank Goeltz, of the visitors, were preserving their status as favorites.

Mitchell, seeded No. 1, took A. Brooks into camp, 6—1, 6—1. Garnett, the second local choice, swept through Kahl Spriggs, 6—2, 6—0. Latona defeated Peter Garner, 6—4, 6—0, and Lynch beat Herbert Treuthart, 6—0, 6—2.

Frank Goeltz, rated Number 1, among the visitors, did little to ruin his rating trimming Wiley Glassmire, 6—1, 6—0. It was Goeltz's first start. George Dunklin, of the University of Virginia, another visiting star, had a hard time with George "Ducky" Cranston, before winning, 10—8, 6—1.

Allan Blade, a youngster seeded 11, kept pace defeating John Durst, 6—1, 6—1. Three of the other choices did not play. They were Allie and Hy Ritzenberg, of Washington, and Frank Thompson, of the University of Virginia.

Women's singles begin at the Columbia Country Club today. Pairings for all matches today and all results yesterday follow:

Steel Strikers Hurl Defiance At Vigilantes

conference between Republic officials and union spokesmen, called to meet again Tuesday, would be productive of results.

The mass meeting outside Monroe, called by Homer Martin, chairman of the United Automobile Workers Union, yielded bitter criticism of Republic Steel officials for refusing to sign a contract—an agreement similar to those already signed by United States Steel and other companies.

The huge crowd, arriving in motorcades from Ohio and Michigan cities, cheered when Bittner declared, "there will be no peace in Monroe until a contract is signed.

"There is a duty that says we must go to Monroe," he went on. "Sunday isn't a day of work. We'll allow them (in Monroe) to rest in peace today. But steel workers will be back in Monroe within two days. We're going to assert our God-given right."

The meeting adopted by acclamation a resolution calling on Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan to provide protection for the return of pickets to the Newton steel plant.

"We are going to picket this plant," the resolution stated, "and we demand the immediate resoration of civil liberties and the right to picket the plant without interference by anyone."

Martin, who arrived late at the meeting, after a dash by plane from Anderson, Ind., sounded a Nation-wide call to workers, declaring:

"Our fight is the fight of the common people. We ask every workingman in America to join in a modern crusade to end oppression and establish security to which the common people are entitled.

"It is our purpose to spread the light of democracy to every part of this land until autocracy and industrial slavery have been driven from the country."

The Monroe mass meeting, which town officials had described as "loaded with dynamite," was delayed more than an hour and a half in getting under way, due to the slow transit of motorcades through the bottle-neck entrance to the park

Hundreds of late arrivals, headed for the meeting, turned back when the saw the choked condition of the road.

Inside the park the crowds cheered as Charles Parker, chairman of the U. A. W.'s rent-strike committee in Pontiac, shouted into the microphone:

"We intend to organize Monroe. The union will not stand for the breaking up of peaceful picket lines."

Tension was high within the city, with National Guardsmen and State police setting up a tight highway blockade between the Lakeside Park and the outskirts of the town.

Van Bittner told the crowd:

"There is no labor organization in America which the C. I. O. is trying to destroy.

"We are trying to bring the unorganized workers into the organized labor movement. I want to say this in the beginning. Republic Steel may as well understand now that they will finally sign a wage agreement with the union.

"I remember Mr. Sloan, of General Motors, said he would never sign a contract, but he discovered that if he wanted to manufacture automobiles he would have to do it with members of the auto workers' union.

"Mr. Chrysler said the same thing. But again the men in the automobile union demonstrated he would have to sign with the union or make no automobiles.

"We are an American institution. We want no violence. But one thing the employers may as well know now and that is that we will fight for our rights. Laws of the United States give us the right to organize and bargain collectively."

Bittner said the mayor and other officials would be made to "pay for what they did and pay well."

Bittner referred to Monroe as "nothing more than a fly spot on the United States of America."

"If we wanted violence we'd go down to Monroe today and take it.

"We don't want to destroy their homes. Why aren't they men enough to come out and say they are against the union and for the Republic Steel Corporation?"

Bittner told his audience the steel union had sent a message to Tom Girdler, chairman of Republic Steel, protesting the riot at Chicago and at Monroe last week.

"We told him we were not going to stand for it and we meant what we said," he said.

"Long after Tom Girdler's gone, Lewis and the C. I. O. will be remembered as a humanitarian institution.

"Do they imagine they will keep us out of Monroe forever? We are going to make those hoodlums in Monroe as decent as some of the good citizens of the city. We are going to bring our union into Monroe. Isn't it a sorry spectacle that we have a government such as we have in Monroe? Don't they know that the great industrial army has pledged its life to free the slaves of labor!"

Bittner said the union was going to stay in Monroe as long as there was any steel made there.

Company Defied.

"If we let the Republic Steel Co. get away with this disgraceful attack on our rights," Bittner said, waving his arms, "we wouldn't be entitled to be known as American citizens."

The guardsmen, armed with bayonets and machine-guns, sharply challenged motorists approaching the city. Few were permitted to enter.

Gov. Murphy, arriving in the role of an observer, announced he would use the militia at any time "in the public interest." He added that he would keep the National Guard on emergency duty as long as necessary.

The strike originated May 26 in the refusal of three independent steel companies—Republic Steel Corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and Inland Steel Co.—to sign C. I. O. union contracts. Company officials have expressed willingness to bargain with the union for its members, but have contended signing of a contract would lead to "a closed shop and the checkoff," by which union dues are deducted from wage checks.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Members of the United Automobile Workers Union who thronged about the speakers' stand at the State park north of Monroe, Mich., yesterday, awaiting arrival of leaders at the meeting called in protest against the breaking up of a picket line at the Newton Steel Co. plant last Thursday. Red and blue banners, some of cardboard and some of cloth, were in profusion.

Lewis Calls Men From Captive Coal Mines, Forms Alliance With Striking Rail Workers in New Drive to Win Steel Strike

the States concerned to close the mills until an agreement is signed. Two governors asked the company (Republic) to do this and the company refused.

Calls Situation Grave.

"Labor is menaced by arms and labor is calling attention to this menace.

"Labor is calling attention to it so that law and public opinion and Government can begin to function before another massacre takes place.

"I assert Grace is working with Potter to influence Republic Steel and Tom Girdler. That is the financial side of it. Weir (Ernest T. Weir, president of the National Steel firm), may be a party to it."

Earlier, Lewis had said Grace and Girdler are so closely allied that the former managed Girdler's campaign for presidency of the American Iron and Steel Institute, a campaign Lewis said was successful by one vote after an acrid contest. He added:

"Then the institute moved to make the election unanimous, and it was announced that way to the press."

Expanding his statement on the gravity of the situation, Lewis said:

"Developments during the last two days indicate that Republic Steel is prepared to arm communities and settle this question of whether contracts should be signed by gassing and shooting the steel population.

"The arming of Monroe, Mich., people, and the coercing of the city council of Youngstown to buy paraphernalia of war demonstrates that fact.

"Republic and the Chicago police are already responsible for the murder of eight people and the maiming of 100 others.

"There is too much gas being bought and used in this country. Labor is not going to swallow it to please men like Grace and Potter and a supergunman like Tom Girdler."

As to the labor alliance he is calling to combat the alliance he said exists among independent steel companies and financial interests, the C. I. O. captain said the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen have agreed they will not settle their Johnstown, Pa., strikes against Bethlehem separately.

Case Against Inland.

The labor board statement announcing the Inland Steel charges was, in part, as follows:

"The complaint declares that the production, maintenance and transportation workers employed at the two plants—except supervisory and clerical employes, timekeepers, technical engineers, technicians, draftsmen, chemists, watchmen and nurses—constitute a unit appropriate for the purposes of collective bargaining and that a majority of the employes in this unit have designated the S. W. O. C. as its representative.

"On June 8, 1937, the complaint states, the S. W. O. C. requested the company to set a time and place for bargaining negotiations looking toward a signed agreement with the S. W. O. C. On that date J. H. Walsh, works manager, replied that while the company would be willing to meet with the S. W. O. C. "it did not propose to make a signed contract" with the S. W. O. C. In this manner, and in other ways, it is alleged that the company has shown that regardless of the terms proposed by the S. W. O. C., it would not enter into a signed agreement. It is declared that the company has negotiated with the S. W. O. C. in bad faith, in that it "still does not intend to enter into an agreement * * * even though the terms proposed by the S. W. O. C. be acceptable to it." * * *

"Directly or through its subsidiaries the company is a manufacturer of pig iron, steel ingots, structural shapes, tin plate, and many fabricated iron and steel products. It is also engaged in the mining and quarrying of iron ore, coal and limestone, and in the operation of three freight vessels on the Great Lakes. In the course of its business it has continually caused large quantities of raw materials to be transported in interstate commerce and has caused large quantities of the finished products manufactured at its plants to be sold and transported in interstate commerce."

"Until the corporation makes a contract with each organization," the workers of neither of the labor groups now on strike at Johnstown will agree to a settlement, Lewis said. The rail workers are employed by the Conemaugh & Black Lick road, a Bethlehem subsidiary.

Negotiation of such an agreement was regarded as of more than immediate significance by some observers. It was pointed out that the two brotherhoods are younger and generally more "progressive" than the three other railroad groups.

The question whether the alliance is temporary or may result in a permanent tie is regarded as of great importance to the rapidly developing C. I. O.

17 Mines Involved.

Orders for the captive mine strike have been sent to presidents of the five district unions in central and western Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia, Lewis said. Seventeen mines are involved.

He expects some mines to close today and all of them to shut tomorrow, and said candidly the aim is to shut off the coal supply of the Youngstown and Bethlehem companies to force negotiations. Steel circles here said, however, the strike may be ineffective in this respect for some time, because a considerable coal supply is already above ground at these mines.

Possibility that Lewis envisages a steel struggle so protracted as to make the coal walkout ultimately effective was read into this situation by some interested persons.

Independent coal operators also will be notified not to fill orders for these companies.

Urges Tax on Ore Imports.

Lewis indicated satisfaction with the effectiveness of the steel strike when he said virtually all "production workers" had walked out. Most of those remaining at work, he added, are white collar workers, private police and foremen.

Analyzing the "background" of the strife, Lewis said Bethlehem is "the low wage company of the industry" and is symbolic of a division within that industry itself. He said Bethlehem's wages are 8 to 10 cents lower than those of competitors.

In addition, he charged Bethlehem's iron ore is 70 per cent imported. Produced by "cheap foreign labor," this ore, he said, "goes a long way toward keeping wages down and giving Bethlehem a commercial advantage in the competitive market."

Since this ore enters the United States free of duty, he suggested Congress place a $2 per ton tariff on it, paralleling existing coal duties.

Silk Strike Plans Made.

Boston, June 13 (AP).—Sidney Hillman, vice chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, tonight announced plans for a strike of 50,000 silk workers within two weeks.

Hillman told a meeting of 100 organizers for the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, of which he is national director, that the silk strike would not affect plants which have signed contracts with the T. W. O. C.

The strike will center in the Middle Atlantic States, he said, and will affect a few New Enland plants.

Hyman Blumberg, New England director for the T. W. O. C. and Solomon Barkin, of New York, national director of research, were also at the meeting.

Blumberg announced contracts have been signed by 63 companies employing 26,000 workers in New England, as part of the 125,000 workers benefited by such contracts throughout the Nation.

United Air Reports Increase in Travel

United Air Lines flew 5,557,225 passenger-miles during the first 20 days of May to equal the total amount of passenger-miles recorded during the enitre month of April, it was announced here yesterday by D. Walter Swan, District traffic manager. Number of revenue passengers increased 40.2 per cent during the first 20-day period last month, compared with the corresponding part of April.

Factors responsible for United's sharp upturn in addition to the seasonal upward trend, include faster coast-to-coast and intercity schedules and lower rates which became effective May 1.

Annual Church Rental, One Red Rose, Is Paid

Manheim, Pa. June 13 (AP).—The Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church today paid its yearly rent—a red rose—to a descendant of Baron Von Stiegel, colonial ironmaster and glassmaker.

The baron deeded the property to the church in 172, exacting a rental of one red rose in the month of June "yearly forever hereafter." United States Representative J. Roland inzer, of Lancaster, "paid" the rose to Mrs. Bessie Boyer Van Tassel, of Newtonville, Mass., descended from the philanthropic town builder.

Reno Judge Marries His Own Court Clerk

Reno, Nev., June 13 (AP).—Judge Thomas F. Moran, 69, who has granted divorces to thousands, was on a honeymoon today with the former Mrs. Jessie M. Smith, longtime clerk of his court. Judge Moran has presided continuously in one of the two divisions of District court since the days when Reno first attracted attention as a divorce center. The bride, a widow, gave her age as "over 21." She is a grandmother.

Rats Are Evicted; Firemen Win Rest

A family of rats lost their home and District firemen gave three cheers yesterday. A rat nest was found in a fire alarm box at Rockwood parkway and Indian lane.

For almost a month linemen have been checking in an effort to find the source of several false alarms and usual signals that spell wire trouble in the fire alarm circuit in the American University section.

Yesterday, Joseph N. Johnson, a trouble-shooter from fire-alarm headquarters, opened the back of a box at Rockwood parkway and Indian lane.

A large gray rat scurried out. Inside was a nest containing several young rats. The nest was removed and the fire-alarm box was made rat proof.

Auto Workers Riot in Indiana; Nine Wounded

Clubs Swing, Bottles and Rocks Hurled at Anderson.

By the Associated Press.

Anderson, Ind., June 13.—Roving police patrols worked under orders tonight to arrest three unidentified men after a street battle between United Automobile Workers of America and nonunionists left nine men wounded and an unidentified number of others injured.

Mayor Harry R. Baldwin announced he would not hesitate to ask Gov. M. Clifford Townsend for military aid "if the situation warrants," but said he felt "the situation does not warrant yet."

The sudden fighting resulted in connection with an appearance of Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president, who left immediately for a mass meeting in Monroe, Mich. Martin declined to comment on the shooting.

Clubs were swung and bottles and rocks were hurled in every direction in the street outside of the unionists' hall.

Police Chief Joseph Carney said he had learned the fighting started after unionists attempted to carry amplifying equipment to a park for a meeting.

"Out of every $7 of products sold in this country, labor only gets $1.10," he asserted. "The farmer receives only $1 for every $3 worth of products."

Carney said he had learned the wounded men were members of a company union at the General Motors' guide lamp plant here.

He said a tear gas bomb had been dropped from a hall window into the crowd.

Riot at Johnstown, Pa.

Johnstown, Pa., June 13 (AP).—Three nonstrikers, a picket and a policeman were injured in a fight with pickets at the Franklin plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's struck Cambria Works today.

A fight started between approximately 25 pickets and an equal number of nonstrikers as shifts were changed. Someone yelled "Scab!" at a nonstriker, who waved a pistol in the air. Pickets closed in on him and other workers scurried to his defense. Organizers for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, city and steel company police broke up the fight.

The flare of violence came shortly after Gov. Earle arrived by plane from Philadelphia to personally attempt to arrange conferences for a settlement of the strike, called at Cambria in sympathy with a walkout of employes of the Bethlehem-owned Conemaugh and Black Lick Railroad.

Doctors Seeking Lower Tax Rate

Boston, June 13 (AP).—Opposition to "socialized medicine" and a suggestion that physicians be allowed a reduction in taxes in recognition of free service they give was expressed tonight by Dr. C. Seaver Smith, New Haven, Conn., president of the American Institute of Homeopathy. At the same time erect, white-haired Dr. Smith said "socialized medicine," would be a "very pertinent issue" at the institute's ninety-third annual convention, which opened tonight.
